TARTAN OFFICE COPY

To God, and the Soccer Team, inspired me with the theme of this yearbook.

"All for Jesus"

All for Jesus, All for Jesus. All my being's ransomed powers. All my thoughts and words and doings. All my days and all my hours.

Let my hands perform His bidding Let my feet run in His ways. Let mine eyes see Jesus only. Let my lips speak forth His praise.

Worldlings prize their gems of beauty Cling to glided toys of dust, boast of wealth & fame & pleasure. Only Jesus will I trust.

Since mine eyes were fixed on Jesus, I lost sight of all beside. So enchained my spirit's vision, looking at the crucified.

O what wonder! How amazing! Jesus, glorious King of Kings deigns to call me His beloved, lets me rest beneath His wings. Amen.

CORAM DEO

In The Presence Of God

God is the God of all creation. There is no corner of life that His light does not fall upon. Indeed nothing exists in our lives that His light does not permeate and sustain, and nothing bad that His light ever fails to illuminate. The eyes of God are ever upon us, but His eyes upon us are not an imposition. They are, rather, an invitation. They are a call to a relationship of divine love and freedom. Freedom not to do as we please, seeking to wrest control from God, but freedom to live joyfully in the understanding of God's love and sacrifice for us. Of his intimate concern for us, and of the glorious union with Himself He has one day promised us.

To live Coram Deo we must begin at the point of understanding that we are not fearful slaves following strict orders, but sons and daughters who joyfully and creatively walk through each moment of each day under the loving gaze of a Father who receives the totality of our existence as an act of worship unto Himself.

"This is the day the Lord has made; let us rejoice and be glad in it." Psalm 118:24

Each day is a gift . . .
an opportunity . . .
a treasure . . .
because God is the one who gives us the breath of life . . .
places before us a purpose and direction . . .
allows us to enjoy the wonder of His presence and the fellowship of His love.

Ecclesiastes 4:8

"There was a man alone; he had neither son nor brother. There was no end to his toil, yet his eyes were not content with his wealth. 'For whom am I toiling,' he asked, 'and why am I depriving myself of enjoyment?' This too is meaningless, a miserable business!"

After a long day of classes, studying, and generally working hard, most students want an opportunity to vent their frustrations and stress, get some exercise, or just have a good time. This aspect of college is the flip side of the academics; it is student life. This realm includes the infamous CAB, all the various clubs, and all of the official activities of the College. Over all of these presides the Student Senate, the official governing body of the students. Some of the more prominent aspects of these student life activities are the Christmas Madrigals banquet, Fat Albert Week, the drama productions, and Intramurals. The aspect of student life is a most important one in a college student's tenure at school.

Ecclesiastes 4:9,10

"Two are better than one, because they have a good return for their work. If one falls down, his friend can help him up. But pity the man who falls and has no one to help him up."

Orientation with a Twist?

Upon arrival at Covenant College, students were greeted with bright smiles and many questions. Rooms were assigned and things were moved in. Box after box was unloaded from individual vehicles to be brought to the rooms.

After settling in, the 208 new students were split into eighteen small groups. These small groups were designed to allow the students to get to know other new students and feel comfortable before the returning students came back. One way to bring these groups closer together was the Amateur Project. The Amateur Project was a new addition to the orientation program. Barb Schreur, the Assistant Dean of Students, was in charge of the program. She chose the Amateur Project to create a situation where groups would have to struggle together in a missions experience. Ms. Schreur contacted the United Way Volunteer Corporation for a list of places that needed work done. Many of the groups complained that even after about four hours of work they weren't complimented on a job well done. Ms. Schreur's response was, "Good. That's what service is all about." "I feel in some ways it was a bonding time for our group, and also a way to show our appreciation of our community," stated freshman Katie Thompson about her feelings of the success of the Amateur Project.

Esther Herron (Freshman)

"I asked a question (well, prayed a question) about a decision of what to do with my time and immediately I get an answer... knowing later that it was the right one. I've also seen God work in my loneliness by being there."

Jackson Alexander (Freshman)

"I've seen God working in my life in the area of self-discipline and time management. He has helped me juggle all the things I've had to do and helped me stay focused throughout the week."

Jessica Wallis (Freshman)

"Sometimes I felt that there were a lot of details left unfinished when I left for school, but God has been faithful in taking care of the smallest detail, and giving me a peacefulness while I'm away from home."

Are the Returning students ready for the Freshman?

The beginning of school is always a hectic time. Freshmen must get used to a new campus and new life and make new friends. Everyone must readjust to very busy college schedules. Outside of classes, there are plenty of options and opportunities to involve oneself in. There are a variety of clubs, intramurals, C.A.B. (Campus Activities Board) events, hall functions, fellowship groups, Bible studies, accountability groups, the list goes on and on. The first all-campus event and the spiritual kick-off of the year is the communion service the day before classes start. The school year officially begins at Convocation. Many deep, lasting friendships are made at Covenant.. Likewise, these four years are a time where strong spiritual growth takes place.

I guess the "if in doubt, bring it" rule really is ridiculous. (Below left)

Colin Campbell (Junior)

"God has been quite amazing in sustaining me in my super hectic schedule. God upheld me in joy through a period of struggle trying to balance my studies, my responsibilities as an RA, trouble in my family back home, and a brief (but present) illness. Even during this struggle, God blessed me by bringing an old friend to visit. It is well with my soul."

"I've seen God working in how he has helped me choose a more definite major. When I first came back, I really didn't know what I would go into, what classes I would take. But through prayer and His help, I have been able to finalize my class schedule. I also see God working with the guys on my hall. Through His help, the guys and I have had a great time getting to know each other and a great time of fun and worship."

Amanda Ellenburg (Junior)

"He has given me an unbelievable amount of confidence where I have been lacking for a long time. He has allowed me to see that I can do a lot more than I think I can with Him on my side."

Happy Days at Covenant Begin With Kilter Night...

Each year a commonly believed rumor about Kilter is passed down that Kilter dates never talk again after the dance. Nevertheless, girls go to such extremes as putting posters on trees, creating a puzzle that reveals the question when put together, having a scavenger hunt of clues ending in the question, or simply asking a guy they met only a couple of weeks before. All said and done, September 16, 1994, boasted of many couples surrounding the college pool decked in clothes resembling the style of the 50's. Girls wore poodle skirts, jeans with the pant legs rolled up, or scarves in their pony-tails. Guys wore blue jeans, white T-shirts, and slicked back their hair; some even had a paper cigarette between their teeth. Different aspects of 50's dress such as Beatniks or Mash's "Hawk-Eye" were modeled by an eccentric few. The evening air was filled with 50's music as everyone attempted to shag the few steps they had learned at the lessons in Founder's lobby just the night before. Some were better than others, as was exemplified in the shag contest. The dancing and competitions, such as the best dressed and the bubble gum blowing, had to be continued in the Great Hall due to the appearance of rain. Spirits were not dampened, however, because the anxiously awaited night had finally come. So why is this first dance, which is rumored to have no remotely lasting results, the one where the girls ask the guys? The answer may be frozen in the fact that Kilter is probably supposed to be an ice-breaker. Changing the usual dating proposal theoretically results in more communication between the somewhat segregated men and women here at Covenant.

Saying Good-Bye to Tucker Hall...

Covenant College, known as the "Castle in the Clouds," has always attracted students not only for its Christian academics, but also because of its character. Located atop Lookout Mountain, Covenant is known for its beautiful buildings and surroundings, except maybe for Tucker Hall. Visitors, new students, and parents all wonder what that "eyesore" of a building is for.

Tucker Hall has been with Covenant from the beginning. Named after a dog that roamed the campus, and befriended students, Tucker found a place in hearts of faculty and students. Faculty offices, the yearbook, and coffee house have all at one time called Tucker Hall home.

But as time went on, Covenant's need for more buildings pushed out "historical" landmarks. In October, Tucker was torn down in order to make way for the new science building.

An "eyesore" to some people, and a "historical" landmark to other, Tucker Hall held many memories. That old, broken down building had character that only Covenant people understood.

These shovels await the momentous occasion of breaking ground. (below left)

No, they are not burying Tucker Hall, they are constructing a new science building. (below right)

Saying Hello to the Science Building

On a fateful day in October, in the place of Covenant's old and beloved landmark called Tucker Hall, President Frank Brock and Mr. C. G. Mills broke ground for the C. G. and Nancy Mills Science Building. This ambitious project is expected to house all science departments, including Psychology, which is housed in the ancient Psych Barn; Computer Science, which calls Barnes Gym home; and Chemistry, Biology, and Physics, which are located in the darkest corners of Carter Hall's basement. The Science Building, which is scheduled to be completed by the end of the summer of '96, will be a tremendous asset to the well being of Covenant. Dr. Doug Sizemore, Director of Academic Computing, said that he expects to see more students come to Covenant to major in the sciences because of this building and its modern facilities. It also has Freshman Biology major Mike McDonald excited, as he says he is tired of working in the basement of Carter. He expects that a science department that is a little more prominent would attract potential students.

On Friday, November 11, Moliere's play "The Miser" made its debut at Covenant College. "The Miser," or L'avare as it is known in French, is a comedy of outlandishly cheesy proportions. It opens with the steward (Valere) in love with the miser's (Lord Harpagon) daughter (Elise). Later, the audience learns that Lord Harpagon has different plans for his family. He plans to marry the girl (Mariane) that his son (Cleante) is in love with, and he also intends to marry Elise to another nobleman (Lord Anselme). This makes for some very confrontational and humorous scenes which build up to climax at the end when it is discovered that Valere is actually Lord Anselme's son, Mariane is Anselme's daughter, and Anselme himself is actually a very wealthy Italian nobleman. Anselme convinces Harpagon to agree to the marriages of Valere and Elise and also of Mariane and Cleante.

Jennifer Graham did a fantastic job of directing this play and in bringing unity to this relatively new cast. Not only did she encourage them to do their best, but also kept their focus on God's glory and wisdom during difficulties.

Stoplight Cafe. Memories in the Making.

The Stoplight Cafe, down at the Art Barn, was the place to be on Friday nights around 10 o'clock. The Stoplight Cafe offered a nice getaway with top of the line live entertainment and excellent coffee. It was serious competition for the other coffee houses downtown.

Two years ago when coffee houses were just starting to become popular, Will Honeycutt and interested students began Covenant's own "coffee house." The Stoplight Cafe offered students on and off the mountain a wonderful chance to enjoy a Christian atmosphere along with the talented entertainment of Covenant students and off campus guests. The Stoplight Cafe was musically oriented, but there were special evenings devoted to poetry readings and art displays.

After Tucker was torn down, the Stoplight Cafe went into limbo. It spent time on the Lookout, in the Chapel, and found a brief resting place down at the Art Barn. Although the Art Barn wasn't Tucker, it did have a charm of its own and allowed the Stoplight Cafe to continue to invite more artists and performers to Covenant and to serve its extraordinary coffee.

From the featured artists, poets, and musicians, to the awesome coffee, cocoa, and tea, the Stoplight Cafe was definitely the place to be on Friday nights at 10 o'clock. Pass the sugar, please.

Entertainment Extravaganza: Guest Musicians visit Covenant ...

Entertainment at Covenant was not just limited to those musicians who performed at the Stoplight Cafe. The Covenant community was entertained by several guest musicians brought in by the Campus Activity Board (CAB). The alternative crowd was blasted away by the Vigilantes of Love. David Wilcox and Jan Krist pleased the folk crowd with their stories set to music. Randy Stonehill, a contemporary Christian artist, played a lot of music that, unfortunately, very few people enjoyed because very few people knew about the concert. Even so, all in all, CAB did a good job of keeping the various music factions of Covenant College happy and satisfied.

What did you think about David Wilcox?

Ye Olde Madrigal Christmas Feaste with Lords and Ladies

ARA outdid itself with "Ye Olde Madrigal Christmas Feaste." The exceptional dinner satisfied the hungry lords and ladies who gathered together in the Great Hall on December 1, 2, and 3 radiating the Christmas spirit. For entertainment, both the Madrigal singers and the brass choir amazed the guests with their beautiful voices and instruments, while the guests chose from a seven course meal served by female students who volunteered as "wenches." A Jester amused the audience with tricks and jokes. The Great Hall was festively decorated with garlands, green ivy, dried fruit, and brightly colored bows. It was fun to see everyone looking their best, since this evening's attire was quite different from the casual clothes usually worn to dinner. Cameras were flashing left and right to capture the memories of the evening. Many people from the mountain community joined the students, along with a few friends and families who came up just for the evening.

Much led up to the actual event, such as the unforgettable night of November 4 when those who wished to purchase tickets camped out on the chapel lawn till the next morning when the tickets went on sale. Homework and televisions were brought out as everyone weathered the cold evening wrapped in either sleeping bags or blankets. The Madrigal singers started practicing for the performance the second week of school. The brass choir devoted at least two and a half hours a week to practices in order to be prepared. In light of all this, the Madrigal dinner once again was the highlight of the first semester for the Lookout Mountain community and the students of Covenant.

Study - On Campus? No Way!

Study. Study. Study. Boring! There has to be more to do on campus than just study. Indeed, there was! Even trapped on campus, people still found ways to keep themselves amused. Friday nights (or weeknights when nothing pressing (?!?) was due) might lend themselves to hunting down a TV and VCR and watching a borrowed movie or just hanging out in the Blink. Special occasions such as birthdays might call for a celebration possibly even including a home (dorm?), made cake, streamers, and balloons. Stress breaks (or overactive imaginations with little else to do) might lead to pranks, such as the thwarted attempt to stack the tables into a pyramid for the second time. Indeed, when the minds of the students drew a blank on entertainment, Campus Activity Board (CAB) was there to help out. From events such as Drive-In Movies and Fat Albert Week to Kilter Night and musical concerts, CAB picked up where the students left off to prove that there is more to do on campus than just to study.

"I NEED to get off this Mountain!!!!!!!"

How often were these words followed by drastic measures of Covenant students? Suddenly a whole hall of guys might pile into a truck and drive down to Krispy Kreme for a donut run. Or - even worse - a whole hall of girls might do the same! When things were not as desperate, less severe forms of entertainment might do. In these cases, going to a movie, either at the dollar theater or a $5.75 theater (with discount $3.75 tickets from Student Development, of course), eating out at a restaurant such as Mr. T's or Bennigan's, playing Lava Tag at the Mountain Maze, or just going to Hamilton Place or Walmart would have sufficed. Then, there were the "long-range planned" (???) events such as attending a Steven Curtis Chapman or Steve Taylor concert, taking a weekend to go camping and backpacking, or spending a day in Atlanta. For a more "elegant" night out, students might have attended a Chattanooga Symphony Concert or eaten at The Loft. They might even have stopped at Cafe Tazza or Rembrandt's on the way back. At any rate, students from every year soon found or remembered ways to keep their sanity and escape from the mountain.

Chorale Tour was blessed by God again and again and again ...

Chorale Tour this year was unlike any other Chorale tour. God was with the Chorale in a special way. God blessed them with His presence and caused the Chorale to grow into a family. They drove all over Florida, arrived at churches early (very different from last year), and got to relax on beautiful Florida Beaches due to many short trips between churches. Many Chorale members got to see friends and relatives they had not seen in a long time. To disturb the distance between the Chorale and their audience, two Chorale members per concert for the majority of the concerts shared a little about themselves and the piece they spoke before. During the last concert at Grace Presbyterian Church in Ocala, Florida, the Chorale felt especially blessed by God. One Chorale member presented an introduction of Pslam 23, and God used her introduction to touch everyone's heart. God then bonded the Chorale even closer that night through prayer and singing. The Chorale concert was followed by Mr. Friberg putting on an impromptu organ concert. It was a great way to end a wonderful, and said by many to be the best Chorale Tour.

How did you feel the presence of God on Chorale Tour?

"The 1995 Chorale Tour was a memorable one for several reasons: consistently good singing on the part of the musicians, mutal respect and concern, very warm reception in the churches, and an uncommon sense of God's presence."

- Dr. John Hamm, Music Director

"The Spring Chorale Tour experience blessed and encouraged not only the audiences, but also the Chorale members. The moving music with its powerful lyrics engendered a worshipful atmosphere. In addition to singing, the Chorale enjoyed shopping, beaching, and getting to know one another on a deeper level."

- Kristen Sandhoff and Amanda Lebreton, Freshman Altos

"Fun, laughter, memories and spiritual closeness for God and one another; these are only some of the peerless experiences of a Covenant College Chorale tour." - Tim Gregson, Freshman Tenor

"Chorale Tour was a time in which the presence of God was known asHis people were edified through Psalms, Hymns, and Spiritual Songs."

Break-on-Impact trips were unique trips in that over the ten days of Spring Break, God granted the people that went on them an opportunity to serve Him and to get to know Him better. Break-on-Impact trips also allowed people to become friends with other people they would not normally have gotten to know.

Is the world ready for Covenant College Students?

The Cross Cultural experience is a new and controversial part of the Covenant core curriculum. Even so, several students participated in this class over the previous summer. Beth Hurley visited a Cherokee Indian reservation in Cherokee, NC where she ministered at a home for senior adults. Charlotte Collison, Melissa Ferman, and Karissa Case visted Europe where they toured and took classes. Heather Hartman stayed at Hiroko Iguchi's house in Japan while teaching English to adults and working with missionaries there. A group of thirteen Covenant students went to Kenya where they took classes, helped to roof an adminstration building, and went on a safari. In short, several students from Covenant participated in extremely unique and different experiences this summer which other students will hopefully have the opportunity to do as well.

Lunch - even overseas - is an enjoyable break during the day. (bottom)

How did you feel the presence of God on your trip?

"I experienced how God is the God of all peoples and that the Holy Spirit is powerfully working among the Japanese. I saw how He could allow me to minister to the Japanese despite cultural and language barriers."

- Heather Hartman (Junior)

"While in Kenya, I had the opportunity to fellowship with various Christians there. Their enthusiasm and sincerity touched me greatly as I saw people actively involving God in everything they did."

- Brian McKeon (Sophomore)

"God allowed us to see His wonderful creation and the works of men. He taught me patience and humility, as I was forced into situations where I didn't know the language and the customs."

- Karissa Case (Senior)

"I experienced reverse culture shock during the first week (of the Kenya trip), and this served to remind me that my home is actually in heaven, and that my fulfillment is only in the Lord, not in an earthly home."

- Sila Tuju (Junior)

"God showed us [the Kenya team] His love and power by keeping us going when we wanted to quit, and by teaching us to trust Him. Many events were out of our control, and we had to believe that God had it in His hands."

Czech It Out II - The Saga Continues ...

Nineteen Covenant students, accompanied by Dr. and Mrs. Ken Austin and Dr. and Mrs. Joseph Pipa, traveled to Olomoc this year. They took classes such as Age of Europe from Dr. Austin, Doctrine II from Dr. Pipa, and Czech history, economics, and culture from various Palacky professors. The group also attended a Czech language class twice a week. As a group, they traveled to Cracow, Prague, Vienna, and Budapest; participated in a worship service led by Dr. Austin or Dr. Pipa on Sunday afternoons and an informal praise/fellowship time on Sunday nights; and ate food at five collective dinners, including two potluck suppers. On their own, the students travelled to various cities in the Czech Republic and to countries such as Austria, Slovakia, Switzerland, and Germany. In addition, many students travelled throughout Europe during May.

All the students can attest to the Lord's faithfulness throughout the semester. He kept them safe on many trips and provided for them countless times. They have also seen how universal their faith is after meeting missionaries, Czech Catholic Christians, and attending the English Mass. Their faith has been stretched, and they have grown spiritually as a result of their time in the Czech Republic.

Top Ten Reasons To Go To Czech:

10) Get your cross cultural experience.
9) Travel around Europe.
8) Great bonding experiences with students you might not already know.
7) Realize the American way of life is not all there is.
6) See different faith backgrounds in action.
5) Learn about yourself; develop independence and self-sufficiency.
4) Learn to appreciate the American culture as you experience another culture.
3) Meet people of all nationalities/ "Destroys ethnocentricity" (Rick Steves).
2) See your faith stretch and grow.
1) Lots of fun!

The Fall Sports are over . . . .

The 1994 Fall Sports Banquet was a chance for the men and women athletes of Cross-Country, Soccer, and Volleyball to reflect upon a successful sports season. After a tasty dinner, the athletes sat back to enjoy the awards ceremony. Each athletic coach recognized the outstanding achievements of both their team as a whole and individuals whom the rest of the team had deemed merited specific recognition. Among the various awards of the evening were: Most Valuable Player, Coaches Award, Position Awards (such as Offense, Defense, etc.), Most Improved, Rookie of the Year, and others. The Banquet was also a chance for athletes to thank the coaches for their sacrificial diligence to the teams.

Dancing under the sea at Spring Banquet . . . .

This year, the Spring Banquet was held at the Tennessee Aquarium. Everyone got to enjoy lively dancing, good non-ARA food, and fish, lots of them. The music of the evening, from YMCA to Brown-Eyed Girl, fit everyone's tastes. It led to many train dances, which everyone had fun participating in. Unfortunately (or was it fortunately?), the dance steps learned a few nights before the dance were rarely used. Before the dancing began, the meal was served. The menu consisted of vegetable lasagna (good for vegetarians and people on diets), tossed salad, and vegetables. The drink of the evening was a tasty, sweet tea with a bit of cherry juice. The meal was fitting because the Aquarium promotes environmental astuteness, i.e. not eating poor, helpless animals. When dancing got tiring, students could take a rest by walking through the Aquarium and looking at the fish. They could also walk outside the Aquarium along the river to where the Southern Belle was docked (where Spring Banquet was held last year) or even further to Walnut Street Bridge. The night air was cool and refreshing after leaving a hot dancing floor. Soon, after much fun and good food, people left with many good memories and tired feet.

What do you remember most about Spring Banquet?

"The unstructured dancing and that it was a lot of fun." - Beth Hurley (Junior)

"The creative dancing with the bunny-hop, kick-lines, and great all-around dancing was my favorite part." - Windy Manguar (Junior)

Jerry(Joseph Nichols) disturbs Peter (Nat Malkus) in the park. (center)

A Zoo Story by Edward Albee comes to Sanderson 215 . . .

Two Men. Jerry (Joesph Nichols), a man who's been to the zoo, and Peter (Nat Malkus), a man who has not.

One pleasant Sunday afternoon in a park, Peter, while reading his book and savoring the solitude on his park bench, is interupted by Jerry, at first politely and then quite rudely. As the two men develop a relationship, they digest what their lives consist of, with Peter's life one of perceived contentment (with his family, job, 2 parakeets, and a park bench) and Jerry's life one of acknowledged discontentment (with a neighbor who plucks eyebrows, a sex-starved landlady, and a dog who despises him). But always Jerry is the initiator, dredging up the details of Peter's life, and informing Peter of his. Blow by blow, Jerry antagonizes Peter, attacking everything who Peter is . . . evenPeter's beloved park bench. The antagonization ends when Peter, pushed to fight for his bench, picks up knife Jerry gave him to fight with, and Jerry winds up dead, impaled on the knife.

Quite ambiguously the Zoo Story ends, with the blood of Jerry on Peter's hands yet it was Jerry who impaled himself on the knife, raising the question of whose responsibility was Jerry's death. With performances on February 18 and March 18, Joesph Nichols and Nat Malkus gave two excellent performances, the latter the better because of their creative interaction with the play. But the emphasis was on the play, not them. Best line (by Jerry, not verbatim)was:"When we're younger, we substitute the fantasy for the real thing. But when we grow up, we substitute the real thing for the fantasy."

Many Laughs at the Night of Comedy

Usually every semester at Covenant, there is one major production by Covenant's own dramatic group, the Mine Shaft Players. That was not so this spring. Not only was there the usual major production in Hedda Gabler, but there were also a number of one-act plays performed early in the semester. These one acts included A Marriage Proposal by Anton Chekhov performed by Travis Knight, Samuel White, and Jennifer Stowe, and Lonestar performed by Phil Ledgerwood and John Livingston. There was also a band made up of Covenant Students named The Carriers. Both of these were comedies performed for the students coming to Covenant for Preview Weekend. Though the practices were few, both casts came through with excellent performances that entertained all.

Two of these one acts, A Marriage Proposal and Lonestar were performed again for the entertainment of the Covenant community. Another one act was performed that night of April 7,1995 . It was called The Sisters McIntosh. It was a play directed by Jessica Wallis and it starred Jessica Wallis, Colby Mason, and Mike McDonald. Again, the one acts were excellently performed to the delight of the Covenant community.

The Gregory M. Simmons Fine Art Series is a success . . .

There are many activities for Covenant College students to participate in, but sometimes, people just get the urge to sit down and soak in something that they don't necessarily have to participate in, but would still enjoy listening to or watching. This urge can be filled by CAB most of the time, especially with their movies and concerts, but sometimes, people don't even want that. They want something a little more refined and educational, but still entertaining. That's the category that the Gregory M. Simmons Fine Arts Series fits into. The Fine Arts Series is a year-long endeavor that seeks to bring in noted musicians and musical groups. There were several such people that came to Covenant this past year. Among those people were Julliard graduate and world-renowned singer Sung Sook Lee who gave a marvelous musical performance, and Mac Frampton, an excellent concert pianist who amazed his audience with his ability to mix a whole LOT of very different musical pieces virtually instantaneously. Another group in the series was the Slovak dance group Lúcnica. In all, the Fine Arts Series was again a great success this year.

The final concert of the year was the Spring Thistle orchestra concert. It was held in the Dora Maclellan Brown chapel at 3:00 pm on April 9, 1995. The audience enjoyed the combined efforts of the members of the Covenant College Symphonette, Brass Choir, and Chattanooga Symphony to produce a beautiful concert in the season of the resurrection of our Lord. This being the second year it was part of the Gregory M. Simmons Fine Arts Series, the orchestra performed works by Schubert, Haydn, Holst, Kabalevsky, Bach, and Gabrieli under the direction of Daniel Bowles.

Not Free. Still not Free . . . .

In the evenings of April 20, 21, and 22, three audiences were able to see the fruits of many hard days and long nights when the Mine Shaft Players performed a masterful interpretation of Henrick Ibsen's Hedda Gabler. The play Hedda Gabler itself is aboout a woman of aristocratic bearing who lives a life that is publically free from any scandal, but secretly she yearns to know the excitement of such things. The play is the story about Hedda trying to gain freedom from everyone - - for her to be in control of every situation, a goal that is ultimately unachievable. In the end, Eilert Loevborg (Hedda's more flamboyant and carousing friend) has killed himself and Judge Brack has attained a position of blackmail over Hedda, who having always been a coward because she never would get involved in any type of scandal, finally puts an end to her cowardice by commiting one final act tha spits in the eyes of the world. She kills herself. This emotional thiller wasperformed extremely well and was well-received by audiences. This is was not only the SIP for Jennifer Graham, but also her final play here at Covenant. Jennifer has lent her marvelous talents to the Mine Shaft Players during her years at Covenant, and her expertise will be sorely missed.

"There will be a scandal, Mrs. Hedda." Judge Brack gains control over Hedda Gabler by recognizing her pistol as the one that killed Eilert Loveborg. (below left)
"Oh George, I hope Hedda likes what I have done." Aunt Juju shares her worries with George Tesman.

It was a Banquet of Memories. . . .

Senior Banquet is traditionally held in the Great Hall, and this year was no different. One highlight of the evening was the traditional slide show. Pamela Kennedy, the president of the senior class, searched through pictures seniors had taken through the four years and old Tartan pictures to find just the right pictures to make the event an success. (Indeed, it was a trip down memory lane.)

Another highlight was the speakers. Dr. Daniel MacDougall, President Frank Brock, Senior Wylly Collins, and Senior Pamela Kennedy all addressed the gathered crowd to share reflections and words of wisdom.

A third highlight was the ARA food, served by professors and adminstrators and some Juniors. Believe it or not, ARA can make good food when necessary. The food choices were: Choice of chicken or beef, with carrots, Arizona Salad (Broccoli and raisins), green beans, rice, and (for dessert) chessecake. To wash all this delicious food down, the choices were: tea, coffee, and water.

Preceding the banquet, there was a president's reception for seniors and their parents. Carter lobby was filled to overflowing with beautifully and handsomely dressed ladies and gentleman. All sorts of finger foods covered the tables. After the Banquet, many parents and graduating seniors filed over to the Chapel to hear Madrigals, Chorale, and Anne-Marie Ferngren perform the Commencement Concert.

Commencement - Ticket to Freedom for Graduating Seniors!

The end of the year involves many events such as Finals, Packing, Senior Banquet, Commencement Concert and, most importantly, Commencement. The night before Commencement is traditionally the Commencement Concert. The Chorale and Madrigals did sing. The Madrigals sang a piece by Mozart named Dixit and Magnificat. The Chorale sang five sacred pieces from their tour reportoire and five pieces based on Shakespherean texts. Commencement was held at the Memorial Auditorium. The doors opened at 8:30 a.m. The prelude began at 9:30 with several brass choir pieces and Michael Linger's oboe solo. Then, at 10:00, Commencement started as a bagpiper played for the processional of all the graduates and faculty. Then, President Brock officially started Commencement by welcolming students and parents alike. Heather Caines and Mark Mountan,along with one Quest and one Masters of Education student, gave their testmonies . Melanie Anderson graced everyone present with her voice. Next, all the soon-to-be graduates got to walk across the stage with much cheering and tears. Then, the bagpiper came back to lead the recessional of faculty and students. Finally, there were many hugs, tears, and congratulations downstairs in the reception area.

Was there any difference between Commencement this year than in years past?

"I don't think there was any big difference. One of the strongest and longest Covenant traditions is a truly memorable Commencement that would exemplify what we've been trying to teach for four years. Dr. Barker has planned Commencement ever since I have arrived, I feel Commencement has truly helped us honor graduates and lift up Jesus."

- President Frank Brock

"It wasn't as long as the previous year and also, it was not as restricted in expressive joy."

- Francisco West (Sophomore)

What did you like best about Commencement?

"I thought Kay James was awesome and I really appreciated what she had to say success."

- Heather Cames (Graduate)

"How about that kilt?"

- Scott Gast (Senior)

"I liked the bar that everyone ran into. I will have to remember not to do that next year."

- Karen Elmer (Junior)

Philippians 1:20

"I eagerly expect and hope that I will in no way be ashamed, but will have sufficient courage so that now as always Christ will be exalted in my body, whether by life or by death."

There are many things that are an integral part of college, things that people expect to see at any college. The sports program at

The Presence of God...

Covenant fits that description, but also has a unique characteristic that not many other sports programs at other colleges have. That characteristic is a distinctive Christian focus on all of the sports played. Whatever the sport, whatever the event, whether it's basketball practice or a volleyball game, the coaches and the players seek to honor Christ in everything.

I Corinthians 6:20

Men's Varsity Soccer

Man on! (below)

The 1994-95 soccer season for the Covenant Scots was a success in every sense of the word. The Scots ended the season with a 15-4-1 record with big wins over Pfeiffer, Florida Southern (a NCAA DII school), and Lee. They also made it to the Regional Semi-Finals, losing only to West Virginia Weslyan, the eventual NAIA National Champions. The Scots won the conference tournament beating King College 4-0 and Lee College 5-0, and were regular season Conference champions.

The season was one of spiritual strength as well. No one from the Scots received any red cards this year as opposed to two last year. One of the season's goals for the Scots was to be a testimony on the field and it seems this was accomplished.

The team was led by captains Matt Tucker and Jon Vannoy. Brandon Shannon was a great help in midfield, and fullback converted forward Chris Hitchcock came through strong at the end of the season (six goals in conference play). Sweeper Teddy Sinn and goalkeeper Josh Leonard also played well on defense.

Women's Varsity Soccer

This year Covenant's first women's soccer team finally made it to "The Yard," bringing the rest of the district home to play on it with them. Throughout the season, Coach Duble set his goals higher and higher as he began to realize the team's potential. By the time the ladies won the chance to host the district playoffs, they had not only won Covenant's respect, but that of the other schools who watched the team play.

The story of this team is long and interwoven. They learned things about each other on the field that they never would have off of it. Lessons about commitment, trust, and integrity, how to motivate, and how to encourage were just a few. In short, they learned the commandment that Jesus said was the fulfillment of all the others. They learned how to love each other through the game that turned into real life.

"This team was a sisterhood, a safe place for me at a time when I needed one, a place for me to assert myself, and to find out what I'm about. (I thank God for you everyday. I'm so proud to have been a part of you. I wish you love, like we had here, in seasons to come, and Godspeed.)"

Men's Cross Country

Enduring the race. (below)
The men's lineup. (right)

This year's Men's Cross Country team experienced unprecedented success. The Men's National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics record was 49 - 20 with first place finishes at the Tusculum and Covenant Invitationals. Team Captain Eddy Hilger led the Team's third place finish at Regionals, finishing fourth; earning the right to represent the school at Nationals in Kenosha, Wisconsin. Perhaps the greatest success the men's team experienced was in the binding together through grace in Christian fellowship. The team started off the year strong by consciously identifying their goal to glorify Christ through their actions and motives. Time was spent in prayer each day giving Christ honor as a team and thinking Him for all of their talents and gifts. The team was known throughout the region by its unity and encouragement of each other and other teams, and its good sportsmanship.

Women's Cross Country

With only four returning runners — three of whom were sophomores — and a plethora of newcomers, some may have assumed this would have been a "building year" for the Women's Cross Country Team. This year would be one from which not much would be expected, with the intention of preparing a young team for the years to come. However, it surely did not turn out that way. The new members of the team proved to be exceedingly hard workers, patient encouragers, and amazing runners. The returning runners were excited, to say the least, about the potential they saw. The blessings went far beyond this, though. They had one of the best seasons in Covenant's women's team history.

On top of this, they grew together as a team and as friends through the practices and races, long van rides, and late dinners. Each one continually encouraged her teammates to keep their goals in the proper focus, with Christ as the center and purpose for it all.

Upon reflecting on the 1994 season, the Lady Scots Volleyball team is reminded of a special time they had over Fall Break in Florida. The team had the opportunity on Sunday morning to worship at a men's maximum security prison where Rebecca Doerbaum's father serves as chaplain. Amy Huffine and Rachelle Biddinger used their musical talents to worship there at the prison. Tears welled up in the girls' eyes as they saw God speak through them to ordinary prisoners. The volleyball team brought together so many different girls who ordinarily would not have come together. As a result, many talents and gifts were brought to the team, but were used to touch the lives of others as well. Just days after their visit to the prison, the team received a card from the prisoners thanking them for such a special time.

Men's Varsity Basketball

The 1994-95 Scots Basketball season began with high expectations that didn't necessarily materialize in the final record. The Scots were coming off a 19-16 year and were returning a solid nucleus. Back with the Scots were co-MVP's from the previous year, Nathan Unruh and Nathaniel "Bats" Miller, along with All-Freshman performer Chad Urie and part-time starter Dell Cornett. The season ended with a disappointing record of 13-20. The Scots were plagued with various injuries as well as extended sickness to key personnel. The Scots also lost many close games, a total of eleven by nine points less. These factors combined with Covenant's tough conference and extremely difficult non-conference schedule turned a promising season into one that did not meet pre-season expectations. Highlights of the year included wins over nationally ranked Alice Lloyd, perennial NCAA III power Maryville at Maryville, area rivals, Bryan College at home and a rout of Tennessee Temple at Temple, and a triple overtime thriller at home against Tennessee Wesleyan. Post season honors went to Nathan Unruh who was named to the NAIA honarable mention All-American team, as well as All-Conference in the TVAC (ruuner-up in player of the year voting) and Joel Lawerence who made the TVAC All-Freshman team. Team awards went to Nathan Unruh-MVP, Chad Urie, Chairman of the Boards and Most Improved, and Eric Herring, Man on the Bench.

At the end of the 1994-95 season, the Lady Scots finished with a 19-13 record. However, many people did not believe that coming in 6th in the conference was an accurate representation of the talent on the team and were disappointed with the results. Player to player, some thought the team had talent to be in the top bracket, but unfortunately the players struggled to come together as a team. They lacked what it took to take care of the little things that win a championship.

In spite of some disappointment, it was a good season. The players meshed well off the court and as the season progressed on the court as well. This building of friendships made all the hard work and travelling really enjoyable. They made some great memories this year off and on the court. Many were anxious to come back next year and do what it takesto make next year's season just as incredible on the court.

No More Skin and Bones	4-0
Shortly After Birth	3-1
A Few Good Men	2-2

Bloodlust	0-4

The men's football season included five teams this year. Rainouts, caused several delays and ultimately caused the total cancellation of the playoffs. This meant that the championship would be decided by the regular season records. Whoever emerged with the best record at season's end would be declared the championship and be awarded the coveted intramural t-shirts.

Shortly After Birth, led by Mark Lynch and Ray Hellings, was the early season favorite as the team handily won its first three games. No More Skin and Bones, however, was also reaching an undefeated season due to the heroics of Chris Wingate and Jeremy Deutschmann. The two teams would meet in the final game to decide the champion.

No More Skin and Bones was impressive in this final game. Matt Kuiper scored touchdowns on passes from Chris Wingate as their team claimed the title with a 14-0 victory. Jeremy Deutschmann scored a touchdown off of an interception for the same team.

A Few Good Men could not overcome a dismal start and finished at the 500 mark while Blackwatch and Bloodlust struggled throughout the year.

Games were few and far between in the women's football league. Forfeits and rain-outs severely shortened the season. One team, the Freshmen, never even got to play.

The critical game of the season came in the first week when the Juniors blasted the Jennifer Daniels-less Seniors 21-0. This turned out to be the pivotal game as the Juniors and Seniors both won their final two games. The Juniors' undefeated season could be partially credited to their dedicated coaches, Brent Thompson and Joey Pipa.

The Sophomores had a mediocre year winning one game out of three.

Two teams stood out as the favorites to take the crown. Huckleberry went undefeated and entered the tournament as the #1 team. Meat, led by Benji Clark and Charlie Wier, were definitely the most outrageous team, and cruised to the #2 spot. The Cocheeze started slowly but got six straight wins, led by Dave Harkins and the Belk Brothers to get the #3 spot. The Freshmen, all newcomers to the intramural scene, enjoyed an impressive season with tough physical soccer and took the #4 position.

As expected, each of these teams won their preliminary matches and advanced to the final four. There, Meat forfeited against the Cocheeze in their semi-final match and Huckleberry man-handled the Freshmen to reach the final.

Earlier in the season, Huckleberry had beaten the Cocheeze 5-2 but this match-up would have avery different outcome. The match was tied 1-1 at the end of regulation play and entered sudden death overtime. About two minutes in, Donnie Belk ripped a long shot off the keeper and into the side netting as the Coheeze took the title 2-1.

Women's Intramural Soccer ended up finishing in the spring semester for the first time due to lack of available gym time.

Two teams breezed through the regular season while the third played impressively. The Lethal Potatoes, led by Jen Daniels, Samantha Mitchell and Charlotte Collison, went undefeated with a 7-0 record, entering the tournament. The Balcony plus One held down the #2 spot with a 6-1 record. The Funky Freshman had a fine year with Amanda Lebreton and easily won the scoring title with over twenty goals; that is better than three goals a game average.

In the tournament, the top teams advanced to the final as expected. However, like the men's side, the lower seed would upset the #1 team and grab the title. The Lethal Potatoes, without Mitchell and Collison, would bow to Balcony plus One in a exciting final. The game ended in a 2-0 score as Dumper and Hohenberger both connected first half goals. Without any substitues, the Lethal Potatoes wore down and could never find the back of the net.

A long regular season of intramural basketball ended with an exciting several days of playoffs. In the first round of the men's bracket, the top four seeds got the night off. Four games were scheduled but only two were actually played. Two teams, Gamecocks (5th) and Out on the Tiles, progressed due to other teams forfeiting. The other games' winners were St. Elmo Rules (6th) and A Few Good Men (7th). In the second round, St. Elmo got knocked out by Fletchabuts(2nd) in a rough, foul-plagued game. Gamecocks lost a close one to Orange Crush(4th). A Few Good Men fought valiantly but lost to The Little Flowers of St. Francis (2nd). Ticked Off, the no. 1 team, blew out Out on the Tiles. The final four saw only one game played. The Fletchabuts could not field a team and forfeited to the Little Flowers. Ticked Off won against Orange Crush and advanced to the final. In the championship, Ticked Off overwhelmed the Little Flowers to take the title.

In a season that saw every team have at least one loss, the girls intramural basketball playoffs promised to be action-packed. In the first round of the women's bracket, the top four seeds all advanced to the semi-finals. The women's side was broken into two divisions so each team played a team from the opposite division.

The Cheerios, the #2 seed in Div. 1, took on Those Girls in a down-to-the-wire battle and emerged with a close 29-26 victory. In another slim decision, the #2 seed in Div.2, Rare Essence, took a 22-17 win over Your Mama's in DeNile. The Lava Lamps, #1 in Div. 2, disposed of We're Better Than Your Mama, 36-17. Lastly, the Champions Return, the #1 team overall, ran it up on Hopson's Hoopsters and advanced with an 80-6 win.

In the semi-finals the Champions return continued their impressive run with a big 57-23 win over the Cheerios. In probably the most exciting women's game of the year, Jen Moore nailed a long jumper with several seconds left to give her team, Rare Essence, an overtime victory, 19-17 over the Lava Lamps.

The final was a close-fought battle in the first half with the Champions Return up by one, 10-9. They finished off Rare Essence early in the second half with a 12-1 run, and coasted from there to a 38-20 championship victory.

Champions Return won the season with ten wins and two losses on record. Director's Choice was in a close second with a record of nine wins and three losses. In third plce was Serbian Muscians with 8-4 record, while BR549 and Little Flowers tied for fourth placee. The season was a success because each team member played hard and had a lot of fun.

Leadership skills are needed by the members of the Student Senate, the leaders of the more than forty clubs on campus, and the editors of the campus publications such as the Tartan and the Bagpipe. In each of these areas, students strive to show Christ through the gifts He has given them.

Covenant's minority financial aid policy to change again

By Mark D. Mountan
Editor-in-Chief

A financial aid policy that awarded minority students with financial packages composed of 75% grants and 25% loans instead of the usual 50-50% split offered to to white students was dropped after last year's campus wide controversy in which many of Covenant's white students felt that minority students were receiving more grants on the basis of skin color.

According to Charlie Phillips, Vice-president for Development and Admissions, the policy was dropped because it was "a rigid, inequitable system simply to close our eyes and make determinations like that on the basis of skin color."

Last year's controversy surprised many members of the administration, including Frank Brock, President of the college. "I did not expect the white backlash and it wasn't really worth offending the white people versus the people we would please."

The decision to drop the "75-25" policy was made in mid semester fall '94, but The Bagpipe was never alerted to the change. When asked why the student body was not told about the change concerning minority financial aid, gives last year's controversy Brock responded: "It's probably an embarrassing question because the truth is we assigned the whole problem to a committee and the committee began to manage it and work on it...the committee has never really formally made a recommendation to anybody."

"To me it's all informal. I don't think I've seen anything in writing," Brock continued.

However, during the October 26 meeting of the President's Council, the Council approved aspects of a written "cultural diversity" proposal presented by the Task Force on Admissions and Financial Aid Policies, chaired by Dr Charles Donelaison.

The proposal called for financial aid packages to be awarded to "culturally diverse" students on an application basis similar to the merit and Maclellan Scholarship programs. While the Council did not approve all the recommendations of the Task Force, they did approve changes which would greatly affect financial aid.

Phillips explained the proposal saying that, "The Multicultural Committee is going to have a pool of funds to award that the student basically has the burden to show that they are going to make a contribution to the diversity on campus."

According to Bob Harbert, Vice-president of Administration and Finance, the financial pool was funded by collapsing the 16 scholarships originally reserved for qualified African American students. In addition, the international student scholarships were likewise collapsed and put into the pool. However, Harbert pointed out that "the pool for diversity is not as big as the two old (scholarship) programs put together."

Financially speaking, the new policy will be much more practical than the original "75-25" policy, according to Phillips.

"I think the broader definition of diversity is more equitable to start with, therefore the pool concept allows the money to be pegged to the individual's contribution rather than being an across the board ruling like "75-25" with out regard to the individuals particular contribution," Phillips said. "Financially to the institution, it's a more rational investment because it's based on a person and not on a group," he continued.

Dr Cliff Foreman, a member of the Faculty Multicultural Committee, also believes the recent pro-

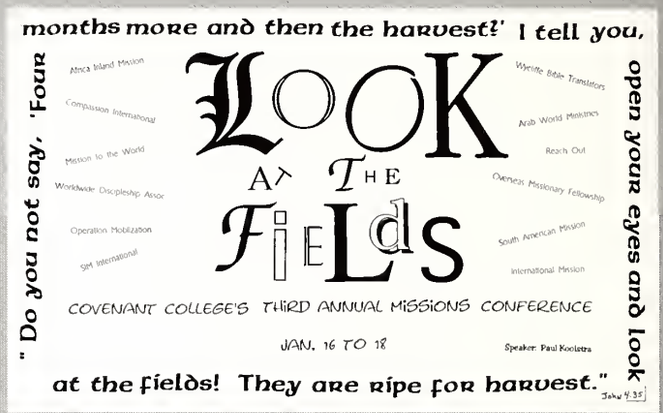
Commissioned



Commisioned made its presence known on campus through the appearance of these missions signs near the time of the missions conference that it sponsored.

The purpose of Commissioned was to lift missionaries, countries, and Covenant's ministries up to the Lord in prayer. Every week members of the club focused on different areas in the world. Missionary kids, nationals from other countries, and ministry leaders came to the club to talk about their personal experiences and to give prayer requests for various countries. Through the personal insights of these people, the group was able to pray more effectively for areas all over the world. The club gave its members a Christ-centered perspective on the different areas and enabled the members of Commissioned to pray more effectively for the people that are without Christ.

Cheerleading at Covenant College was more than jumping around in a cute little uniform. It was more than being at every game. Hanging up the uniforms did not mean that the cheerleaders were done until the next game. Once people became Scot Cheerleaders, they were always cheerleaders, whether it was cheering for the players on the court or encouraging people off the court. The cheerleaders' primary goal was to glorify God through their actions. Their secondary goal was to lead the Covenant crowd in chants to support Covenant's basketball teams. Go Scots!

The presence of God was obvious among the members of the dance team. He brought the team together in a special way and bonded it together. One could hear in the prayers and see in the attitudes of the ladies involved that God was working in each lady's life. The dancers praise God for what He has done for the dance team.

CC Step Team

Praise God that He has fearfully and wonderfully made the members of the step team. The step team members, in gratitude for the way God created their bodies, glorified Him in rhythmic routines using their feet, hands, and voices. With stomping and clapping, jumping and slapping, and even a little leap frog , the Covenant Step Team sought to bring the presence of God to the campus through praise.

EarthKeepers

NEW RECYCLING BINS! After three long years, founder and president Kerry Tebbs rejoiced in the fact that recycling at Covenant was now permanently established. Club members thanked God, Artie Green, Bard Schreur, Student Senate, and all the students who bought EarthKeepers T-shirts for this accomplishment. The funds from the T-shirts went to help pay for the recycling bins.

TREE HUGGING GRANOLAS? Despite the fact that a majority of students did not embrace, but instead were rather skeptical, of the purpose for EarthKeepers, the club stood on the sound Biblical teaching that everyone must care for the earth. The members hope their fanatical reputation challenges the status quo apathy.

Evangelism Club

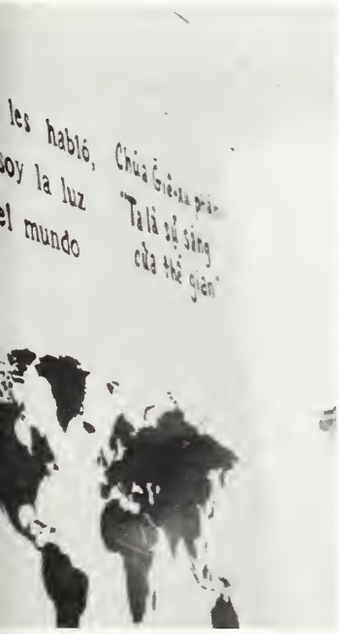
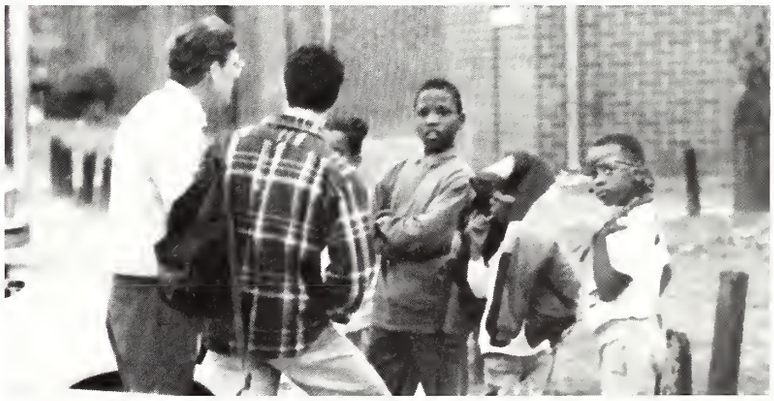
During this past school year the evangelism ministry saw God at work in the housing projects of Chattanooga. When the club started out in August '94, it was a two-man ministry. So, these two members prayed to the Lord of the harvest that He would send forth laborers into His harvest, and He did. The Lord provided many faithful servants to proclaim the gospel. By God's grace and for His glory, the Evangelism team was able to share the gospel with many people, to give away many New Testaments (as well as various other Scripture helps), to encourage fellow believers, to befriend people in the community, and to counsel people with questions about the Bible. What a blessing it has been to be faithful to and to serve the King of Kings who loves Christians and gave Himself for them.





Inner City Ministries

Inner City Ministries (back row, left to right): Matt Kuiper, Mark Michal, (middle row, left to right): Jody Barrett, Lois Gutierrez, Teresa Parler, (front row, left to right): Karen Elmer, Heather Hartman, Jamie Griggs, Christy Ellingsworth, and Jennifer Calvert.

Beginning with Bible-Alive time (the preparation hour) to actually being with the Inner-City kids, the members of the Inner-City team could see how God worked in both the members' and the kid's lives. This year the members got to know the kids on a more personal level. The members were also challenged to share the truth and to give the kids the loving attention they needed so much.

International Students Ministries

The International Students brought more than mere cultural diversity to Covenant, they brought a love for God and passion for ministry from a different perspective.

Most of the Internationals did not grow up in Christian families. Many became Christians as teenagers and have powerful testimonies of how God saved them from the pit.

It has been encouraging to hear these testimonies and, in awe, to worship God who transcends language and culture in His love for His elect.

Jackson Hill Fire-Fighters

The Firefighters were (left to right): Billy Blea, Hannah Peters, Jeremy Roerdink, and Jeff Roerdink. The children of Marshall and Sue Rowe are also picrtured.

The Fort Oglethorpe Fire and Rescue Department's Station 19, Jackson Hill, was located just south of Covenant College on Scenic Highway. It was manned primarily by Covenant students. The fire fighters had a unique opportunity to minister to every community within their fire district as well as to all calls outside the district in South Lookout Mtn. Station 19 provided all its fire and services free of charge to the community. The fire fighters fought fire because God placed a burden on their hearts to serve in this way. They worked hard to be good at what they did, saving lives and protecting property, but they also took their faith and mission seriously. They were in constant prayer and studying of scriptures to find out how to better implement their faith into their work.

Juggling Club

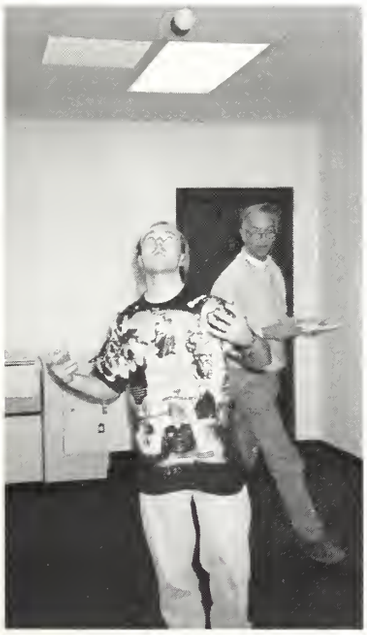
The Juggling Club was relatively new to Covenant College. The juggling club met at regular intervals to have fellowship, fun, and to improve coordination. Clearly, the presence of God was seen in the club by the smiling faces of those who participated.

"If you can juggle 18 hours, a job, and a social life, what's a few chain-saws?"



Kharis

Kharis Dancers were (counterclockwise from the left): Kate Peters, Heather Cross, Jennifer Daniels, Ashley Brown, Lelia Kendrick-Holmes, Jennifer Magnuson, and Lesley Monroe.

God was faithful to bless Kharis with His presence as the dancers desired to maintain Kharis' goal of worshipping God by interpreting His blessings and the truth He revealed to them though dance. It was evident that God was actively involved in answering their prayers for creativity in making up steps for the dances. The members of Kharis felt they were fulfilling their identity as image bearers of God as He provided them with the ability to move and to be creative.

It was awesome to be able not only to dance but to work together and interpret music, a song's words, or scripture into dance. They felt as if God was giving them a greater understanding for what they heard. The most fulfilling and greatest proof that God was working through Kharis was when the people that watched them dance understood what the dancers of Kharis felt in their souls and were touched by God through the dancer's movements.

Mine Shaft Players

The play was the thing that always made everyone involved go beserk! Casts had to endure long rehearsals and late hours as well as outside pressure (occasionally they remembered that they actually had classes too!). In the midst of all the insanity, however, people inevitably formed bonds of friendship and, here at Covenant, also turned to the Lord for guidance and strength. Indeed, He has been faithful this year, for nothing the Mine Shaft Players accomplished could have done without the Lord's patient and continual help.

Mu Kappa

The purpose of the Mu Kappa group was to give support to the missionary kids that go to Covenant. The students had meetings where they played games and reminised about similar experiences that they had while at "home." They also met once a week for dinner to share and encourage one another. There were about thirty missionary kids that attended Covenant this year.

New Generation Ministries

New Generation. God is raising up a new generation. God is raising up an army.

Through prayer, the study of the Word, consecration, discipleship, and leadership training, this campus ministry was one that not only affected the lives of Covenant students, but was part of the national college and high school ministry. Being part of a national organization was a source of strength for Covenant students who realized they were part of something larger than just this campus.

Pre-Professional Science Association

In this its second year of existence, the Pre-Professional Science Association (PSA) continued in its original intent to provide opportunities for students interested in the sciences to become involved and oriented with the many different aspects of the sciences. Specifically, PSA attempted to assist students by enabling them to pursue to a greater extent their particular majors and disciplines. Graduate school and summer program information, along with volunteer opportunities were also provided for interested students. It was the Pre-Professional Science Association's desire to provide the opportunity for fellowship among those interested in the sciences, while at the same time enhancing the reputation of Covenant's science program.

Prison Ministries

Prison ministries consisted of (back row left to right): Amy Moffitt, Kari Carlson, Bryan Counts, Amanda Levi, (middle row, left to right): Susan Fields, Raven Crown, Deborah Spiritosanto, Clair Miller, Tim Black, Brent Moore, Ben Baxter, Charlotte Crane, Elizabeth Wynja, and lying across the front: Corrie Blankenbeckler.

It's really difficult to say exactly what it was about going down to a halfway house that made people want to go in spite of homework, deadlines, and scheduling conflicts. Perhaps it had something to do with getting the opportunity to be around people who, like Covenant students, were at a point where the rest of their lives was a blank page, and who were uncertain about the future, but unlike Covenant students, were there because of mistakes that resulted in time spent in prison. Perhaps it had to do with closeness felt during times of prayer where honesty became a necessity and God was earnestly petitioned to bless His work. Whatever the reason, no one came away from Dismas House with quite the same perspective on God's mercy, and almost everyone who had been to the house came back again and again.

The purpose of the Psi Chi was to encourage, stimulate and maintain excellence in scholarship and to advance the science of psychology for the kingdom of God.

Each semester Psi Chi sponsored a traditional sunrise service on Day of Prayer. Vans and cars caravaned in the dark hours of the morning to Rock City where students gathered on the bluff overlooking Chattanooga and spent time praying while waiting for the sun to rise. Afterwards, doughnuts and hot chocolate were enjoyed by all before returning to campus. This campus-wide activity helped set the tone for the remainder of the day.

The Rafting People

The Rafting Club was disappointed that on their last rafting trip the Ochs river was iced over.

In its second year, the Rafting Club added the Nantahala and Nolichucky Rivers to its list of accomplishments. The Nantahala river featured small rapids allowing club members to guide their own rafts. The Nolichucky was one of the prime rivers in the Southeast. The aforementioned rivers featured class III and IV rapids.

Student Senate

The Executive Committee:
Travis Knight
Rob Rowton
Toni Cagnolatti
Trippy Farmer

Class Presidents:
Pam Kennedy
Stephen Davenport
Joel Wells
Josh Good

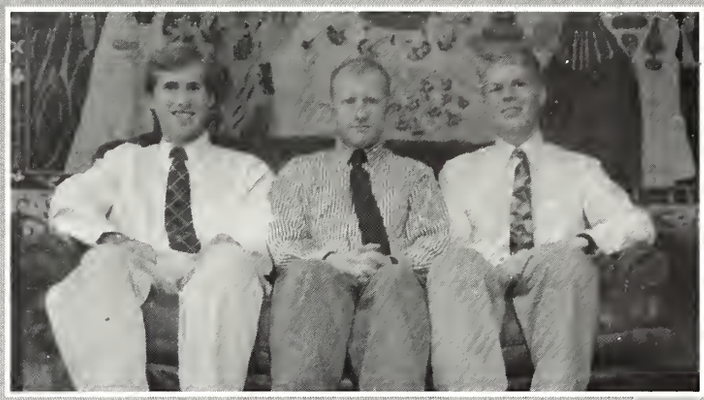
Director of Student Ministries:
Bryan Walker
Student Ministries Coordinators:
Tim Cummings
Christopher Dyches

The Executive Committee

God gives people everything that they need for life. The Senate appreciated the gifts that God had given the members, including good health, sound minds and able bodies. However, on top of that, He also gave the Senate the opportunity to be leaders in the Covenant community and hopefully to bring Him glory by the efforts of trying to be good stewards of all the other things God has given them!

The Presidents

Class functions were a bit different this year from years' past. The 1994-95 school year included several opportunities for interaction between the freshman, sophomore, and junior classes. The Sunday evening "praise mixer" both the fall and spring semesters allowed members of the different classes to join together in praising God. Staff members also took time to share with students on a personal level. As class leaders, we thank God for the people who helped make these events come together so that we could enjoy one another in CORAM DEO, His presence always.



Student Ministries

Student Ministries had certain goals that Bryan Walker felt were addressed and have served the Covenant community well. First, he abolished all honorariums in his department because he thought it was an excessive allocation of funds. Second, Bryan wanted to integrate the local churches to sponsor the ministries in some way so that Covenant ministries would not be a para-church within a para-church. Third, he wanted to put together the third annual missions conference to address the issue that all Christians are all missionaries in some way as conforming to the Great Commission.

Bryan praises and thanks God for allowing him to serve the men and women of Covenant. May God bless the Covenant community in all that the students do in and for His great and mighty name.

The Tartan

The 1994-1995 Tartan staff included, but was not exclusive to, the following people(back row, left to right): Lelia Kendrick-Holmes, Karen Elmer, Kristi Spinello, Janneke Counts, Risa Sankawa, (front row, left to right): Allison Boyd, Samuel White, Alli McFarland, Stephen Davenport, and Toni Cagnolatti.

The Tartan, as everyone knows, involved huge amounts of work. While working on staff, people learned how to deal with other people, deadlines, and time management. People also learned to feel the presence of God in several ways. This year, God's presence was found in the satisfaction of completed deadlines, a staff celebration at Bennigan's, and just messing around with fellow Tartan people. God's presence was also felt during the difficult times. The conflicts in and among the staff were resolved with help from God. He sowed much peace among the staff. He gave the yearbook all the success it has enjoyed.

The Thorn

The Thorn's staff consisted of Steve Zinn, Chandra Sollé, and Amy Moffitt.

We must accept that this creative pulse within us

Poetry reveals to us the loveliness of nature, brings back the freshness of youthful feeling,
revives the relish of simple pleasures, keeps unquenched the enthusiasm which warmed the springtime of our being,
refines youthful love,
strenghtens our interests in human nature,
by vivid delineations of its tenderest and softest feelings,
and, through the brightness of its prophetic visions, helps faith to lay hold on the future life.

Urban Young Life

Urban Young Life was a ministry that reached inner-city kids of the junior high age group. Throughout the involvement with this ministry, the leaders saw that actions spoke louder than words. Each week, little bits of the gospel were presented, but what really touched the hard hearts of these kids were the leaders' faithfulness to them. That was how the kids saw Jesus. The coldest and toughest kids asked the leaders, "Why do you do this," and "What do you get for being with us?" In their environment where they can trust no one, the leaders' consistent and caring involvement in their lives made these kids want what the leaders had in Jesus. It was a great joy to see Jesus make incredible changes in the lives of these kids.

Widow's Outreach Ministries

Hannah Peters standing among the widows to whom she minstered.

The Widow's ministry was a way for Covenant College students to reach out to widows in the Chattanooga area through physical work, writing encouraging letters to the widows, and meeting them all once a month at a luncheon for Bible study, prayer, and fellowship.

Students were also encouraged to build deep relationships with these women. Many times, students felt that they were out to minister to these ladies, when, most of the time, the widows ministered to them simultaneously. Being a part of the Widow's ministry was a great way to serve as the Lord has called all Christians to do.

"Religion that God our Father accepts as pure and faultless is this: to look after orphans and widows in their distress and to keep oneself from being polluted by the world." James 1:27

Proverbs 27:10

"Do not forsake your friend and the friend of your father, and do not go to your brother's house when disaster strikes you - better is a neighbor nearby than a brother far away."

When compared to other liberal arts schools, Covenant College is a unique institution. Covenant's faculty, staff, and especially its students take its motto "In all things...Christ pre-eminent" seriously. For each hall of each dorm, there is a resident assistant (RA) which presides over the hall, assists new students in getting familiar with Covenant life, and helps returning students with room situations. RAs have given their hallmates much needed support and friendship. They have also encouraged hall unity through hall meetings, Bible studies, crazy activities, and service projects. In doing so, they hope to edify each individual and build up those individuals to form a close knit group that share the common bonds of being brothers or sisters in Christ and living on that hall.

Welcome to the Combs of the Cat—site of Chattanooga's only J.C. Ranch, home to the not-so-famous incognito galactic tarantula, and the last bastion of antidisestablishmentarianism. Welcome to the place where ideal forms with gossamer wings dive and whirl in devilish dance of delight, where Eutychus lives - and dies - again, where the Shoup of Earl bellows his sovereign will and where stereos and other electronics came to die. Welcome to where lots of women tended to not be, unless they got lost or something.

"What," you cry, "was the structure of your ideology?" "Shaq!" we replied, because we just didn't make a lot of sense sometimes.

We did without the fancy frills of other halls. One didn't find any electric garage door openers, Aqua Net, or cuticle depressors here. We tried to lynch the Ku Klux Klansman that lives inside everyone at times. We surmounted the mental beaver dams that hold lesser men in check. Yea verily, we were men of destiny. Waldo tells us, "a foolish consistency is the hobgoblin of little minds," and we believed him. We had a well-developed stance on transubstantiation. Take a bite out of God? We didn't think so. So, welcome to the Catacombs. It is an Eden, and a really, really huge fire hazard.

Advent

This year saw the birth of a new hall, Advent. An advent is a coming and refers specifically to the coming of our Lord. Advent was one of the most diverse halls in terms of ethnicity, musical taste, and hair styles.

The men were proud to house four Japanese and two Hispanic men; the men felt that their presence brought a new and broader perspective to hall discussions and activities, such as celebrating an authentic Sam's Club Japanese Dinner with their sister hall.

They had fun sharing musical delights-Brahms, U2, Amy Grant, Mozart, Smashing Pumpkins, Strauss, Def Leopard, Monkey Hustle, Green Day, Beastie Boys, Enya...well, you get the picture. With a little consideration and a lot of discussion, though, they began to master the fine art of living with people's peculiar tastes.

Their diversity found expression in their hair styles, with everything from dreds, wanna-be afros, and mid-back lengths to bleached curls and goatees appearing simultaneously.

With over half of the hall entering as newcomers to Covenant, they learned to do more than just tolerate their differences, they enjoyed and valued the diversity of God's people, and challenged one another to grow in their daily walk with Him and realized just "how good and pleasant it is when brothers live together in unity!"

If there was one word to describe Second South it would have been, change. Second South, known traditionally as the International Hall that studied a lot, became the hall that never slept. Consequently, Second South went ballistic. The ever famous "hall soccer" was also changed by the Freshmen with the addition of the fire alarm and several broken light bulbs (It adds a kind of romantic atmosphere, no?). They had numerous activities, including Freshman Initiation, capture the flag, movies at the Brocks, and baseball games. In addition to being the Intramural football champs, they were brought some shocking news early in the year...Dr. Foreman had moved to the hall.

Not only did the spirit of the hall change by way of personality, but it changed spiritually. The hall Bible Studies focused on servanthood, and involved deep discussions and prayer for one another. As a wonderful example of servanthood, one member of Second South began the year by washing everyone's feet as Jesus did for the disciples. The hall was also concerned with academic pursuits as Dr. Baxter and Dr. McLelland spoke on the members of the hall. Overall, the members and the hall grew closer together as Christian brothers in the Lord.

2C! These two letters represented the hall Second Central. But what exactly did the hall represent? They liked to think that they were trying to be a hall of God. Sure that sounds like a cliché, but they really tried to make it so. Their ultimate goal was to make God "Central" to their thinking, actions, and talk. They liked to think their Sunday hall Bible study was different from the norm. Instead of a straight study from the Bible they did different things. Thanks to the blessing of a musician (Thanks, Campbell), they liked to praise the Lord through songs. The songs ranged from "Amazing Grace" to "River of Life" to "The Blood Flows." The music would go for a good portion of the time. They had a Bible reading, and then shared ideas from the past week and prayed for their fellow brothers on the hall as well as throughout the campus.

Although their main purpose was to praise God, there was also time for hall bonding. Some of the ways they bonded were through scavenger hunts, arousing study breaks, hall parties, late-night bowling, occasional "good natured" pranks, eating together, and just hanging out on the hall.

The R.A. John Marino and Carter Council Representative Pierson Gerritsen worked hard to make the hall a brotherhood. The most important idea they tried to remember was that the hall was not theirs, but God's.

Why were they called Second Belz? Duh. Anyway, they liked their name. Second was a young hall, full of energy. It was a year when the members built strong friendships, and learned more about themselves and about their relationship with the Lord. They were challenged in prayer, in particular, and grew in their accountability with each other. Sunday night praise was an important part of their week. They also enjoyed much food together. Everything from doughnut runs, lots of chips and salsa, study breaks with girls' halls, to stuffing themselves at Randy's and Ryan's. Most importantly the individual men of Second Belz made it a great hall.

The Ghetto- as everyone knows- was a crazy group of individuals. Often times, words such as obnoxious, exclusive, even brash were used in characterizing the Ghetto and it's inhabitants. But, as one member of the hall for the past three years said, "these words shed little light on the true spirit of the Ghetto." In a very real and unique sense, they were a family, and although each of them brought their own individual "baggage" to the hall dynamic, they accepted and thrived on those differences. From Sunday night prayer/Bible study time, to classes Monday through Friday, even to their witness on the soccer pitch, cross-country course, or wherever, the Ghetto strived to bring all aspects of life into submission and service to their Lord Jesus Christ.

"An amazing spirit of acceptance was felt among the guys on the hall. I never felt that since I was a freshman I just didn't fit in. The pleasant aroma of brotherly love rose above the stench of hallway trash." -Jeremy Jones (Freshman)

Throughout their long and lustrous history the men of Rivendell have been renowned for their courage and strength. Having braved and survived Jack's Place once without power and in the middle of an ice storm, they decided to make things a little more challenging this year: they invited the Balcony Babes to go with them. Wielding hair-dryers and shotguns, the girls tested them every chance they got. But the spirit within the men of Rivendell never broke. There have been other challenges through the year (some easier, some har...nah!) but through it all, they have stood tall. I wish I could say the same about the fish.

This year, Third South had 18 new students, more than any other hall. Because there were so many, they were able to take ownership of the hall and feel at home early in the semester. The new and returning students meshed together really well forming a friendly, social hall. Third South was home to girls from such exotic places as Morocco and Nebraska. Their athletic ability was shown by the number of varsity soccer and volleyball players, cross-country and dance team members and cheerleaders that lived there. The variety of activities the girls were involved in off the hall enhanced the time that they spent together. Activities included everything from a Lookouts game with Second South and dinner at the Brock's, to birthday parties at Randy's and Sunday night hall fellowship. Their prayer was that this year they would not only achieve academically and grow in their friendships, but that they would also know God in a more intimate way from having lived with each other.

Once upon a time deep in the jungle, there lived 25 girls. They had been raised by wolves and believed themselves to be monkeys. Jenn the Queen of De-Nile and Momma Lisa took care of everything in the jungle (-the mighty jungle, the lion sleeps tonight.) The little monkeys delighted in swinging about on vines, free from the hindrances of clothing, singing praises as they beat their ches ... uh, ankles.

Their main joy in life was using things over and over and dividing their trash into separate receptacles. For some inexplicable reason this strange behaviour developed into a worldwide trend called "recycling."

One day the little monkeys discovered big hair bowling and made a spectacle of themselves. Momma Lisa decided that her young were acting quite uncouth and needed haircuts-so she shaved their heads and there was much rejoicing (a wimbaway).

Beneath the surface of the jungle lived a bunch of rats, Van Zee that. The little monkeys liked to frustrate the meaningless existence of the rats by stealing their banner, and hanging it too high for them to reach. The rats retaliated by blowing conch shells loudly.

The moral of the story is - DON'T MESS WITH YOUR MOMMA! (a wim ba way)

Third Central: The Heart of Carter Hall

Third Central was a hall where you could always find an open door, someone to listen, or someone to do aerobics with. The twenty–eight women who lived there genuinely cared for one another, exhibited a humility to consider the needs of one another as greater than their own, and built solid relationships with each other. They built this tie by having hall activities once a month, celebrating everyone's birthday, and participating in a weekly fellowship called "Stopwatch." Stopwatch was a time when the girls came together, shared with each other, and prayed for one another. It was a time where each member of the hall could be uplifted. Each girl that lived there built memories of one another that she will always cherish. These memories were possible because of the foundation they had as sisters in Christ.

Glamorous Ladies! 3rd North ladies pose for a picture.

The girls of Third North were a group with energy and a wide variety of interests. This was clear in all the activities that they were involved in: basketball, soccer, dance, volleyball, cross-country, youth ministry, teaching pre-school, camping, babysitting, music, and so much more. With all that was going on, it was hard to find the time to get together and enjoy one another, but when those rare moments came, they enjoyed just being together, talking, and hanging out.

They had the opportunity to meet together as a fellowship group. Each week someone had the chance to share about what God was doing in her life, which proved to be a very personal way of going deeper with each other. But before someone shared each week, they spent time praising God through song. One of their favorite things was to sing together, "Have you seen Jesus my Lord." This song taught them that Jesus could be seen in every area of life, if they looked for Him. With all the different activities pulling these girls in so many different directions, Christ was at the center. When they looked, they could see Jesus at work in each situation.

As their hall picture depicts, each member of Fourth South was very different and involved in a variety of activities. So, of course their schedules were very busy and it was very hard to spend time together. But when they did, they enjoyed time together laughing, talking, eating, and enjoying each other's company.

They were giving of their time, energy, and talent to support other hall members, whether it was with an encouraging note, spending time listening to a hallmate, attending a soccer game, or the play. The women of Fourth South learned what it meant to support each other as sisters in Christ. A couple of their favorite hall events were an annual Yom Kippur feast at Randy's and making stockings to decorate the hall.

Hall verse I Peter 4:11

This was a great year on the Balcony. They tried to keep their focus on God (I Chronicles 16:11) and to live according to the Bible (I Peter 4:11). They had Tuesday night times of prayer, praises through song, and wonderful Donut Praise Runs every month. They had a prayer walk around Founders for a week to pray that the walls between people would come crumbling down. On Day of Prayer, they took picnic lunches to Cloudland Canyon and enjoyed fellowship with one another in God's beautiful creation. Overall, they saw God work in their lives through the powerful prayers of His children.

Welcome to 4th Central-

Home of some of the best looking girls on campus. Well, they had the best time anyway. They were also the proud recipients of the first place award for the Carter Hall Christmas Hall Decorating Contest. Whether it was Sunset Rock on the Day of Prayer, breakfast with Blackwatch, hall fellowship on Sunday night, a mystery date scavenger hunt, or "girl time" at the Brocks, 4th Central was a hall that was bonded together through Christ's Love. God blessed this hall with laughter, friendships, and even an occasional date on Saturday nights.

Diversity was an evident part of this hall. The members all had very different lives and interests, but were able to come together as a hall to love and support each other. Some activities they did were: The Great Mystery Date Dinner, water bombing the Ghetto, and Old Fashioned Photo shoots. Although diverse, they really liked going on donut runs, hanging out with fellow hallmates, and talking about "the usual".

Katwoman Leading the Litter at Founders

Born and bred right here on Lookout Mountain, Kathleen spent her first fourteen years here on the mountain. Her dad was the associate pastor at Lookout Mountain Presbyterian Church. When the time came for a college decision, Kathleen headed on up to Wheaton, Illinois to attend Wheaton College. After majoring in communications, she went further north to Eastern College to work as an admissions counselor. For three years she experienced the college environment and enjoyed the time spent with the workers in the admissions office. The job at Eastern backed up her desire to be involved in the lives of college students. The sales part of the job was far from a favorite. So back to Wheaton (the call of the city is irresistible!) Kathleen went to pursue a masters in educational ministries. Grad school was wonderful, another period of confirming her desire to be involved in the lives of college students. Grad school completed, Kathleen came to Covenant to fulfill the position as Resident Director of Founders. Her time is spent training RA's to minister to the halls, planning Founder's activities, counseling, and discipling. Kathleen's desire is to continue to work with college aged adults.

The apartment life helped students take what they knew about the Bible and put that knowledge into practice. Since there was more freedom and less supervision for these students than for those who dwelt in the dorms, living there was more like living in the "real world." Indeed, the students learned that when sin came knocking at their door, they had to decide whether or not to let it in.

When I lived on campus, I enjoyed campus life, being surrounded by so many people, but there was always a seed of pressure inside. This seed never relaxed. It was there when I was sleeping, alone in my room, or walking on campus. The pressure of school could not be separated from my life. This seed remained until I sensed its absence. When I moved off campus, this seed was weeded from me. I can go to school, interact with people and when I return home, I am away from school. I feel ... relaxed. I feel a peace I did not feel on campus. I have no regrets about living in the dorm, it contains some of the most important times of my life, but this last year I was ready to move off campus.

The 1994-95 school year has shown that Carter Council contains eleven enthusiastic representatives from each hall who are ready and willing to serve. Our goal as a council is to unify the residents of Carter Hall. We believe that as Christians, we are to be unified as the body of Christ. We have tried to create unity through hall activities, a lip-sync contest, a Christmas party, Tour de Carter, Carter Praise, Picture Night, and a 24 hr. prayer chain in the tower on the Day of Prayer.

Founders

Founder's Council sought to help make Founders a better and more fun place to live, as well as to help improve Founder/Carter relations. They saw God at work on the halls as they sought to serve their R.A.s and fellow hall members. Many of the members saw their halls become more unified and seek to be a place where God was glorified and students could develop into strong Christian adults. They were also able to help each other on the council, encouraging and lifting each other up, praying weekly for each other as well as for the problems and concerns they saw in Founders and around campus. They want to thank all those who supported them by buying donuts all year, and even more those who didn't, because they sure enjoyed all those free donuts.

March 1994: ten students opened up envelopes and found out that they would be one of Founder's R.A.'s for 1994-95. This was their official job description:

The Resident Advisor is responsible for working toward the academic, emotional, social, and physical development (all of which are considered "spiritual") of his/her residents. The R.A. is to demonstrate an active Christian commitment, manifested in such areas as a counselor, advisor, and facilitator of student development.

Unfortunately, definitions like this are much easier to write than to live out and to pontificate on during an interview than to be during the year. In addition, each R.A. knew or soon learned that he or she was completely unable to change other peoples' lives. Leadership made them feel weak, the kind of weak that made them want to quit—the same weakness that God grabbed a hold of and began using to change lives in Founders. The R.A.s' servanthood caught the community's attention, but their humility made the students look past them to God.

" . . . I will not forget you!" Isaiah 49:15

Remember all the things you worried about that never happened . . .
Remember all the needs you had

Remember all the nice things that happened that took you by surprise . . .
Remember all the difficult situations that God used for your good . . .

Jeremiah 29: 11

"For I know the plans I have for you," declares the Lord, "plans to prosper you and not to harm you, plans to give you a hope and a future."

There is a very special group of people here at Covenant College—a group of people who have worked their way through three years of college and now stand at the end of their college career. This group of people are the one and only SENIORS. They have been through it all: the excitement, the boredom, the food, the activities,

The Presence of GOD...

the victories, the defeats, the SIP. The Seniors have run the race that was marked out for them, always aware of the hand of God guiding their every step. Now the question becomes, "What next?" Well, this unique group of individuals will be moving on—moving on to different places, moving on to a different community of people, moving on to new and exciting situations—these Seniors are moving on to a new race that God has prepared for them. This is a race full of joys and fears, happiness and tears; a race meant to challenge them as well as to help them grow. And just as God's presence was with them in the race before, even more will His presence be with them in the race to come.

Hebrews 12: 1

". . . and let us run with perseverance the race marked out for us."

Friendly, outgoing, fun, caring, encouraging, and positive. These are all words that come to mind when one thinks of Heather Erin Caines. Throughout her experience at Covenant, she has learned that classes aren't everything; they are important, but so are relationships. She advises the underclassmen to establish deep friendships and to use those friendships to learn about themselves. Heather has also learned to be honest about sin and difficult times and she has reaped the benefits from expressing these to friends. Heather challenges the underclassmen to respect all others and also not to be restricted to just one group of friends. Heather, herself, would like to be remembered as someone who wasn't just friends with one group of people.

Heather, born in the Cayman Islands on April 17, 1973, is one of six children in the family of Render and Linda Caines. After two other moves, her family finally established their current residency of Ringold, Georgia. Her father is currently the pastor of Covenant Presbyterian Church in Chattanooga and her mother is a homemaker. The rest of her family consists of an older brother, and four younger siblings. On a sunny Saturday afternoon at the Caines' home one could expect to find them all involved in a friendly game of family flag football. Their family is very close and thoroughly enjoys spending time together.

Heather loves to sing and has been a member of Chorale and her church choir throughout her college years. The past two years she has served as an RA for Third North. She has led her hall in intramural sports, hall fellowships, and hall activities. As the leader of her hall, she has learned that even with all the different activities pulling hall members in so many directions, Christ is at the center. By looking closely, they can see Jesus at work in each situation.

Heather would like to use the gifts and talents God has given her to relate to people. She would like to use her degree in Sociology to work with children. Upon graduating, she anticipates going to St. Louis to work. The desire closest to her heart is to get married and raise a family of her own, but is content for now to follow the path God has for her.

A Southern prodigy from Macon, Georgia, young Wylly Collins was too much for the locals. So armed with his parents, older brother James, and sister Lachlan, the family set out to conquer Milwaukee, Wisconsin. Spending time with his father and the rest of his family- shaping and molding them into what they are today- Wylly set the precedent for the future life to come. And the rest, they say, is history. That is, a history major.

The legend continued through his junior year in high school, when he first came into contact with Covenant College during Preview Weekend. During his four years here, the mark left by Wylly has affected and impacted many of the students and faculty, in a way that only somebody blessed by the Lord could. Because he spent time with his hall, was involved in intramurals, and was on the Student Senate his freshman through junior years, there were few who did not feel the Lord moving in a special way through him.

The outside community was equally important to Wylly as well. To that end, Wylly became the liaison between Lookout Mountain Presbyterian Church and Covenant. God used experiences gained by working with student government and his church to lead him toward the pastorate.

Wylly attributes his peace to the Lord. The sum of all that he believes and tries to live daily can be found in a hymn that we hear often in Chapel - "Great is Thy Faithfulness." When asked why he chose this hymn "to sum it all up," he answered that looking back he really didn't have a direction in his life, but now he is able to see the Lord was there and that He had full control. Because of this and the influence that Covenant had on him, he feels that he is more prone to experience life, to be positive, more assertive, and more confident in Christ.

Wylly is truly a witness of God's faithfulness because he has been given knowledge and wisdom that he has used to glorify God. Evidences of his desire to glorify the Father have been his love, compassion, and joy for life and Covenant.

Whether running in the national championships or starting one of the few successful Bible studies on the Ghetto, Eddy Hilger is a talented man of the Lord who continues to put the Father first in everything that he does. In his last semester at Covenant, Eddy has led a life that many college students would envy and admire.

Born in Montana as a vagabond (his father was in the Air Force), and settling in the sixth grade in Colorado Springs, CO, Eddy enjoyed the warmth and love of close Christian parents and an older sister. After entering Colorado Springs Christian School, he spent time developing his soccer and basketball talents at the same time holding to his high academic standards.

During his five years at Covenant, Eddy, has enjoyed a life full of the blessings of a Christian education, superb athletic career, and the many friends and acquaintances that have increased through the years. After spending four years as a varsity soccer player and three on the basketball team, Eddy decided to go for a third sport to add to his list amazing feats at Covenant. This fall he went to NAIA nationals during his first try at cross-country.

After graduation, Eddy plans on heading back to Colorado to save some money and spend time with his parents. He will also get a chance to spend time in the great outdoors and indulge in some of his many hobbies, including elk and deer hunting- "especially in Montana," hiking, camping, and skiing, which is probably his favorite.

More than just a wonderful athlete, dean's list student and a genuine and open person that attracts people to him, Eddy Hilger is a man that truly seeks the Lord and His will for everyday life with all his heart and soul; one that lives up to the high standards that Covenant's motto challenges us all to reach for "In All Things Christ Pre-Eminent." Though he leaves behind an example for us to follow and an overwhelming amount of love, Eddy also leaves a void which no one can fill. He will be sorely missed.

Rugged mountains, solitary sunsets, starry nights... these are settings in which Stephanie Marshall feels at home. With a sharp mind and a broad outlook, she pursues novel experiences and new adventures as a way of life.

Growing up in Taiwan, Stephanie was exposed to a culture different from the one in which she now lives. The second of five children, she was able to observe firsthand the struggles and joys of her parents' mission work. This observance has given her a heart for the unreached, an interest in cultural experiences, and a desire to return to the mission field at some point in her future.

After returning from overseas, the Marshall family spent one year in Wheaton, Illinois before moving to permanently reside in Los Angeles, California. Later, Stephanie followed her older sister to Covenant in 1991.

A diligent student, Stephanie was awarded the MacLellan Scholarship for her academic achievements and her leadership ability. Her course of study at Covenant has been divided between three fields: Sociology, Psychology, and Missions. She has had ample opportunity to use these fields while at school as she participated in numerous clubs and ministry groups including Mu Kappa, Chorale, Inner City Ministries, Young Life, and Intramural Sports.

At Covenant, Stephanie has developed skills in examining her presuppositions to know what she believes and how to evaluate the beliefs of others. Her experience here has enabled her to apply her faith to new contexts and situations.

Although often teased for being notoriously short, Stephanie has a momentous influence because of her devotion to friendship and ability to encourage. "Make a few, deep friendships with people who will challenge you," she advises, "Never write somebody off or hesitate to befriend them, because the influence one person can have on a life is lasting."

Missionary work is on her agenda; Stephanie has committed her life to the will of God, and looks for Him to guide her through the rest of her life.

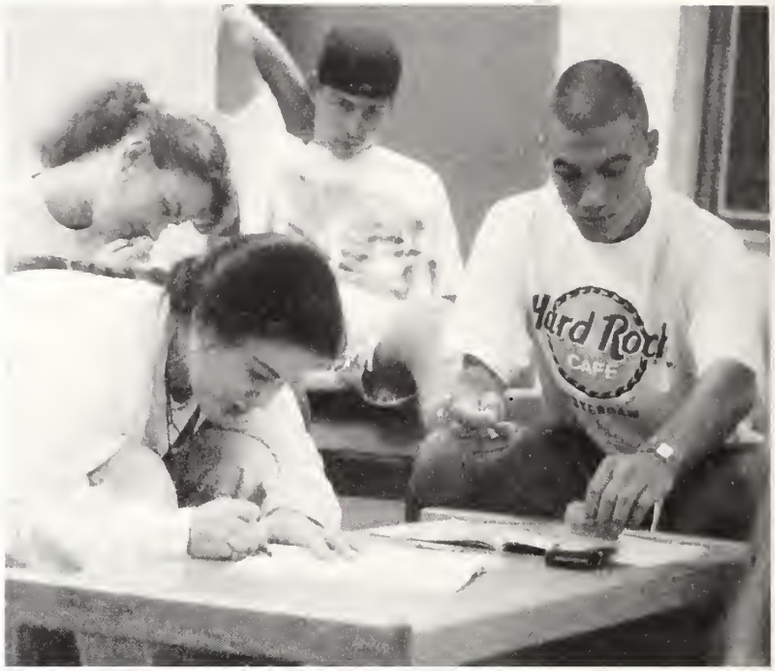
We're outta here!



Studying in

Just think, you're not here by chance,
but by God's choosing.
His hand formed you
and made you the person you are.
He compares you to no one else-
you are one of a kind.
You lack nothing that His grace can't give you.
He has allowed you to be here at this time in history to fulfill His special purpose for this generation.

" To every thing is a season, and a time to every purpose under the heaven."
Ecclesiastes 3:1.

Written by Roy Lessin
Used by permission from Dayspring.

James 1:22

"Do not merely listen to the word and so deceive yourself. Do what it says."

Studying. AUGH! It seems that we eat, breath and sleep to study. It consumes our lives totally. However, it doesn't mean just reading books, memorizing facts and spitting them out again for a quiz, test or exam. It means applying these facts, thoughts and questions to our lives.

The Presence of GOD...

The Covenant College motto - "In all things.....Christ pre-eminent"- challenges us to apply God to our lives in EVERYTHING. Without Him it all becomes empty, void, without worth. Phillipians 4:13 states "I can do all things through Him who gives me strength".

It all ties up with God.. So what if your calculus knowledge doesn't seem to connect with the analysis of T. S. Elliot. All that work will eventually come to good.

Genesis 50:20

"You intended to harm me, but God intended it for good to accomplish what is now being done, the saving of many lives."

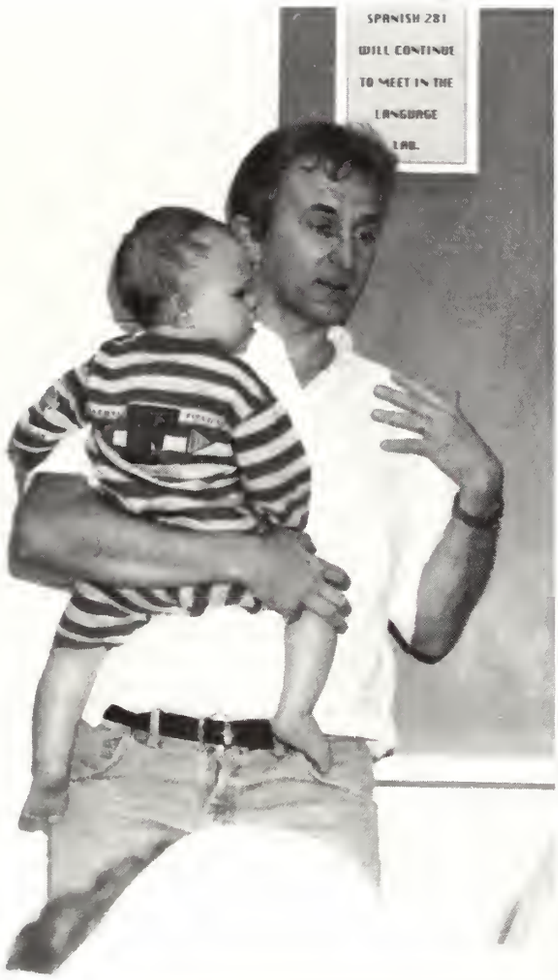
A picture is worth a thousand words...



Leading in

"Thy words were found and I did eat them; and Thy word was unto me the joy and rejoicing of mine heart: for I am called by Thy name, O Lord God of hosts." - Jeremiah 15:16

The voice of the Lord is the best sound we can hear.
He speaks to us as a helper to encourage . . .
as a friend to support . . .
as a shepherd to guide . . .
as a teacher to instruct!

Written by Roy Lessin

James 3:1

"Not many of you should presume to be teachers, My brothers, because you know that we who teach will be judged more strictly."

At Covenant, we students can see the glory of God shining through any professor or staff member. Teachers, such as Dr. Graham and Dr. Krabbendam, are so excited about teaching us how to apply God to every aspect of our life. Their enthusiasm for God and their subject material is almost tangible. Their caring and love for the students is as warm as the hugs they so freely offer. To be taught by these men and women is truly a blessing, for God is using them all as his instruments.

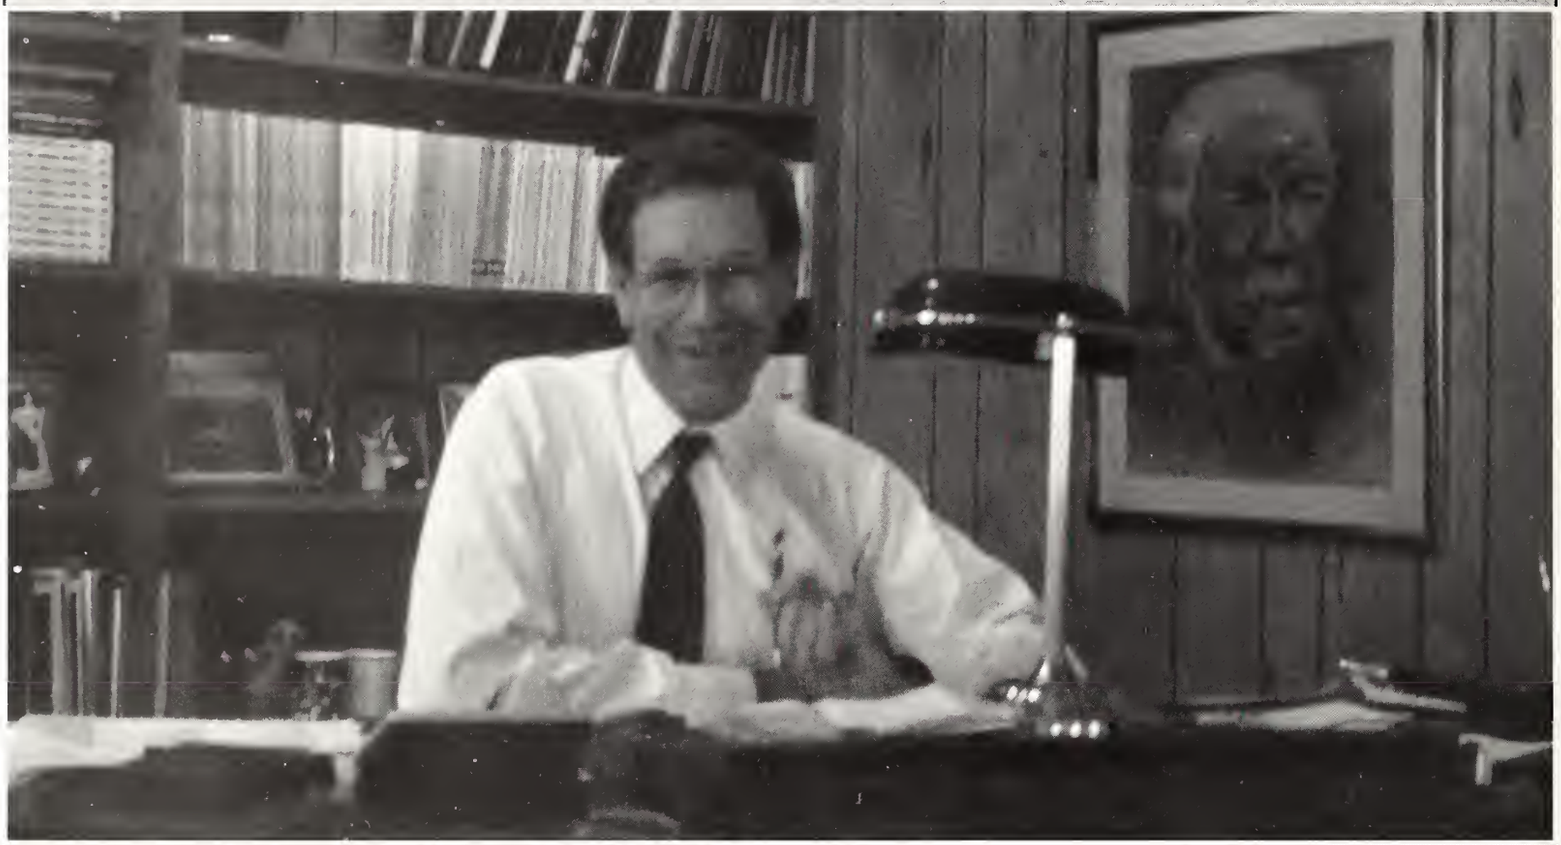
Hebrews 13:7, 17

"Remember your leaders, who spoke the word of God to you. Consider the outcome of their way of life and imitate their faith... Obey your leaders and submit to their authority. They keep watch over you as men who must give an account. Obey them so that their work will be a joy, not a burden, for that would be of no advantage to you."

From the Desk of the President:



"One of the comments I hear from students is that it is easy to become complacent as a Christian at Covenant College. "Everyone is a Christian," some say, as though it might be easier to be a Christian if there were more non-Christians present. The comment is not all bad, because at least there is recognition of the danger of complacency; but the comment does reveal how easily we can slip into the idea that living up to a human standard is all that is required of the Christian.

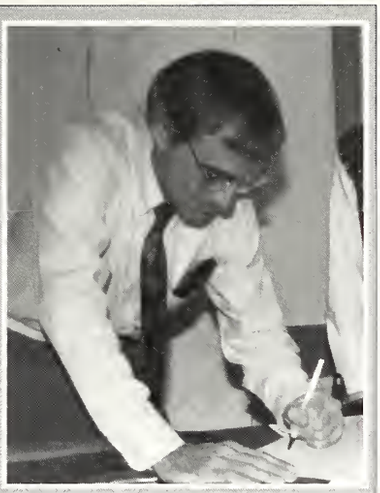
The irony of the complacent Christian students is that faculty, who grade the student's work, and resident advisors and directors, who seek to maintain true spirituality on the halls, seldom see the basis for such complacency. Furthermore, I almost never hear this comment from alumni. To the contrary, I most often hear from alumni that Covenant helped them put together the puzzle of life—how to have joy in the midst of struggle, why to stick to one's standards of honesty when others succeed by dishonesty, how to give when others are always taking, and how to have hope in the midst of cynicism and despair.

Some say that the pastor's job is to unsettle the comfortable and to comfort the unsettled. If we could truly understand what it means to live in the presence of God, I think we would all be unsettled. Think of the pain of the millions who are malnourished and diseased and how this must grieve Jesus. Think of material strife, divorce, alienation, sexual perversion, and violence among our families; and be reminded that Jesus would have families relate as He relates to His Father. Think of the hopelessness, suicide, drug and alcohol dependency, and be reminded that Jesus wept as he overlooked Jerusalem and longed to gather the people to himself as a mother hen would gather and protect her chicks.

Jesus begins the sermon on the mount: "Blessed are ... " Those who seek blessedness in the form of material prosperity or success are always disappointed. Blessedness comes from living in the presence of God — and being a peacemaker, being pure in heart, being persecuted for righteousness sake.

As you look back on this year at Covenant College, it is my prayer that the peace and joy of learning and living among brothers and sisters will spur you on to live in the presence of God wherever you are. May your peace and joy not come from your circumstances, which are always subject to change, but from the spirit who lives in you. If you will forgive as you have been forgiven, love as you have been loved, and do whatever you do to the glory of God, your light will so shine before men that they will see your good works and give glory to your Father in heaven. Pray for God's grace that you may live daily in His presence."

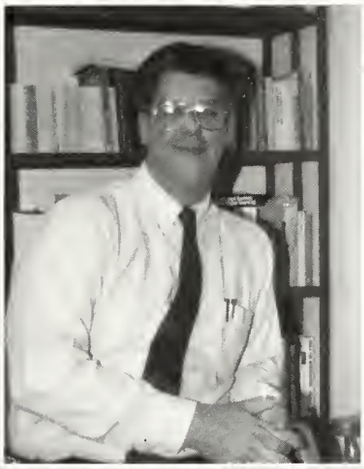
Jerry King



Mr. Jerry King - the man with much experience. After obtaining a degree in psychology from the U of S FL, Mr. King joined the Air Force for four years. During this time, he was ministered to by the Navigators and later joined their staff. Through the Navigators, Mr. King met his wife with whom he ministered to people in GA and TN. After this, he was a human resource manager and a safety inspection consultant. He received his MA in vocational rehabilitation from UGA in 1984. He has worked as an adjunct professor with the Quest program and is now Director of the Career Development Center.

Mr. King has many plans for the Career Center. He would like to see all the students come in for help finding jobs. He would like to show students the value of a liberal arts Christian education. He wants to help students learn how to articulate not only who they are, but also the value of their degree and an understanding of the marketplace. Take advantage of this invaluable resource and begin now preparing yourself for life in the "job world."

Cal Beisner



Mr. Cal Beisner - author, editor, professor, husband, father, and an attender of Reformed Presbyterian Church—all in one! Born in Tusculoosa, Alabama, Mr. Beisner spent his childhood in rural upstate New York and his teen years in LA. He received a BA in IDS and an MA in society. Since then Mr. Beisner has written six books. Future plans include receiving a Ph.D. from St. Andrews in Scotland. Mr. Beisner will, however, return to teach at Covenant.

Mr. Beisner and his wife Deborah have "three and a quarter dozen" (six) children. They live in St. Elmo in a house registered in the historical foundation, i.e. a "fixerupper!"

Mr. Beisner's many ideas for Covenant include seeing Covenant "enhance the nation's appreciation of heritage of Godly liberation under the law" and understand "the importance of order in commonwealth to human freedom and happiness with happiness equally blessed by God." Mr. Beisner, himself, would like to be a "cheerleader of excellency in scholarship, citizenship, and service in the Kingdom of God."

J. C. Upton

Mr. J. C. Upton was born in Sweetwater, Tennessee. He grew up in a close family of nine children. At the age of fourteen, he became a Christian and later attended New Tribes Bible Institute in Wisconsin. From there Mr. Upton traveled to Papua, New Guinea where he was a missionary for five years. Shortly after returning from there, Mr. Upton married his wife, now of twenty-five years. They have three adult children.

After being a pastor at a local community church for eight years, Mr. Upton decided to attend Covenant to get his degree in teaching. He majored in History, minored in Secondary Education. Mr. Upton later attended UTC to get his Masters in Education Administrative Supervision. He is certified to teach in Chattanooga and is currently the only professor at Covenant who is fully qualified to teach Bible in the public schools.

Mr. Upton says he would like to see Covenant become more racially and ethnically diverse so that more types of people can benefit from all Covenant has to offer. While Mr. Upton's official title is Assistant Professor of Education, he spends most of his time in the IDS Department. He currently teaches one class, but is involved in the development of several other courses. He is part of the Multi-Cultural Enhancement Committee and Self Study Planning Committee.

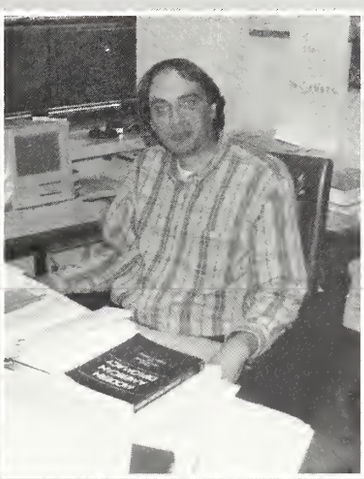
Mr. Upton enjoys outdoor activities, building things, and reading books. Overall, he is a wise and kind man who works hard and has an excellent set of priorities.

Jeff Hall, the new education professor, is from Pittsburgh, PA. His family includes his wife, Lynn, and their four children. He has attended Grove City College, Slippery Rock University, and UT. He used to be the elementary-school principal at CCS.

Mr. Hall can feel the presence of God among the faculty and students at Covenant. He hopes to remind the professors at Covenant that their teaching is not in vain and to encourage them to continue the excellent job they are doing. He has been encouraged by the discussions he has had with students about spiritual issues and can sense an active and growing faith in them. He wishes to model the motto of the college through his involvement in academics and his relationships with students.

Mr. Hall is an elder at St. Elmo Presbyterian Church and is on the Board of the Christian Internationals. His interests include attending musical concerts, playing the guitar, taking his family mountain biking, and going on walks.

Jeff Hall



Pennsylvania. That is where Mr. Paul Morton was born. He grew up in Philadelphia, the son of a Reformed Episcopalian minister. Mr. Morton graduated from Covenant, as did his three older brothers. And as a matter of fact, he is related to Professor Chuck Anderson. Mr. Morton has obtained an MA in history from Villanova and another MA in history from the University of Southern California. Right now, he is completing the final stages of his Ph.D. and is busy writing a dissertation on the diplomacy of migratory birds in the 20th century (a topic addressing international environmental questions).

Mr. Morton recently moved to Chattanooga. After six years of living in Los Angeles, Mr. Morton is back in the East. He has been buying clothes to accommodate the colder temperatures and the less casual style of dress!

His vision for the school is to develop critical thinking, intellectual Christians who will impact the world.

To Laura Noel:

The real "cutie;"
A natural beauty.
Plenty of humor;
No shy bloomer.
Nothing slow;
A joy to know.
Above the crowd;
We are truly proud.

Love,

Mom and Dad

A Litany for Friendship (Received from the Director of Camp Weed)

Living God,
Loving God,
We thank You for the gift of Your Presence here in our midst;
For Your love and acceptance of us as we are . . .
For this school year together to affirm our identity
To celebrate our time together for the wrongs and to ask for forgiveness for wrongs we have done to each other.
We thank you for the diversity of talent that is represented here for the special uniqueness that belongs to each of us.
We met as strangers,
but are strangers no more.
United in our common task
we have become friends.
Saying good-bye is difficult.
Together we have worked learned, laughed, struggled, grown and changed.
There have been arguments and there have been songs.
We gotten mad, teased, been uptight, worried, and been silent.
It is much more comfortable to remember the joy of our friendships. . .
The smiles, the hugs, the caring and sharing . . .
the jokes, the play, the games.
Treasured memories . . . valuable always.
Tonight we celebrate the gifts and talents of all who have been a part of our lives for this summer, and our cotributions that will be remembered for year to come.
But, before we go our separate ways let us acknowledge before God and each other both the pain and the joy that we have experienced together.
For the times we assumed we knew all there was about each other;
For assuming to speak for each other
For defining, limiting, labeling, competing, not listening, and oppressing each other;
For excluding, withholding, insisting, hindering, ignoring, forgetting and resisting teh Christ in each other;
For the many times we have severed our relationship by word, deed or attitude
For the times we have hurt, hindered, judged and been insenstive to one another
May we now ask forgiveness from our God, ourselves, and each other.
(Silence)
For the many times we have shared the excitement of accomplished goals;
For knowing that our efforts were appreciated
For a kind word, a warm and gracious smile, supporting, nourishing, confirming, nurturing, and caring for each other.
For embracing, teaching, including, remembering, celebrating, rejoicing and affirming each other's presence
For the many times we have felt close to and shared with one another;
For the times we helped, healed, forgave and responded to each other's needs,
May we now thank God for these and all the other blessings of true friendship.
(Silence)
God, we are Your body, we are Your stewards, we create with You, we are made in Your image, You are the life within us. AMEN.

Thanks to everyone who helped with this yearbook. To my friends, thank you for putting up with me during this process. I hope this book brings glory to God. He has been merciful to me and to my staff and He deserves all the credit that this yearbook is done on time.
